5th EDITION

meraki

199/-

Azadi Ka Amrit Mahotsav

SPECTRUM

WHAT'S INSIDE

01 Desi-Ruption

02 Madras Checks

03 Fashion Vocabulary

04 Handcrafted Designs

05 Parody Fashion Week

To all the NIFT Meals I've Loved Before

07 Depths of RC

08 Barbie X Desi Punk

09 Spectrum Proshows

10 Meet the Spectrum Team

11
A Brave New Year

12
Venting about the Vending Machine

14
Anatomy of Places

13
It's Not Rocket Science

15
Meet Team Meraki

Director's Note

I am delighted to announce the publication of the Fifth Edition of MERAKI by our students. On the prestigious Spectrum 2023 release, the unique theme "Desi Punk" is a blend of Desi and Street culture, providing our students with a platform to explore their individuality.

MERAKI has so far been successful in keeping its readers' interest and curiosity.
I believe that the SPECTRUM 2023 release will have an even more zealous spirit of things, collaborating the eventful, academic, and creative nuances of the same. I hope the magazine continues to reflect our students' personalities as well as their enthusiasm for representing their college and wishing everyone good health and happiness.

Regards,
Shri Vijay Kumar Mantri IAS

For the longest while, the acres of land that our country spreads across, down to the labyrinth of the narrowest of its streets, has adored what boasted a narrative of the west. Through the spheres of movies, the spectrum of music, fashion & clothing, standards of beauty, and a billion things in between, a tinted vision and a certain set of definitions have been in the known and quite the dominators.

Be it a conscious doing or just another case of being stuck in a psyche, our roots and very Indianness somewhere was elbowed to being an unsung tale.
But, this generation, our generation with daring uniqueness and certitude as the weapon of choice, in an attempt to remould the said and reimagine the superlatives, has brought our country out of the clutches of yesterday's tainted standards and has nudged the rise of a true-blue 21st century India.

A sweet rebellion of sorts, a moment of hope, and a long deep breath of reassurance –manifested as Desi Punk, is the coming together of individuality and identities, of diversity and oneness, of authenticity and aspirations. It is the young India dawning upon us. While the first fumes of the idea could be traced back to the beginning of the century, it is only now and more than ever that Desi Punk has with much bravery found its way in, very effortlessly made its space through, and even more unapologetically taken over the urban youth culture.

Indie Artists coming from the deepest corners of the country and carrying its essence within, today, have carved their own unique paths into the hearts of the people, made headlines and a statement. They spread wide across and in great numbers, well bringing in the limelight to all things authentically desi, and reclaiming & regaining its due pride via staunch representation.

देसी ruption

With each stroke of their crafts and expression, coupled with tonnes of courage and a vision for tomorrow's India, they are fostering the society, hushing the wagging tongues, redefining 'cool' and leaving a trail of inspiration behind, all at once. The mere birth and a glorified, celebrated existence of such ideas, individuals and Indianess, in itself is a testimony of becoming of a young nation and a honeyed hereafter.

The country's now dancing to its own striking chords and tunes, mic dropping at its boht hard raps, flaunting bona fide desi with traditional embroideries gracing the denims, and folkloric prints n' checks being cut into modern silhouettes, graphics and animations taking a डिफ़रेंटली वाइब्रेंट (differentially vibrant) turn and lots more. India is, in all its glory, more here than on its way, eyeing a beautifully authentic future with an ardour to the utter brim and the glass looks well half-full.

- Vaishaali Saxena

Illustration:
Noyonika Chatterjee

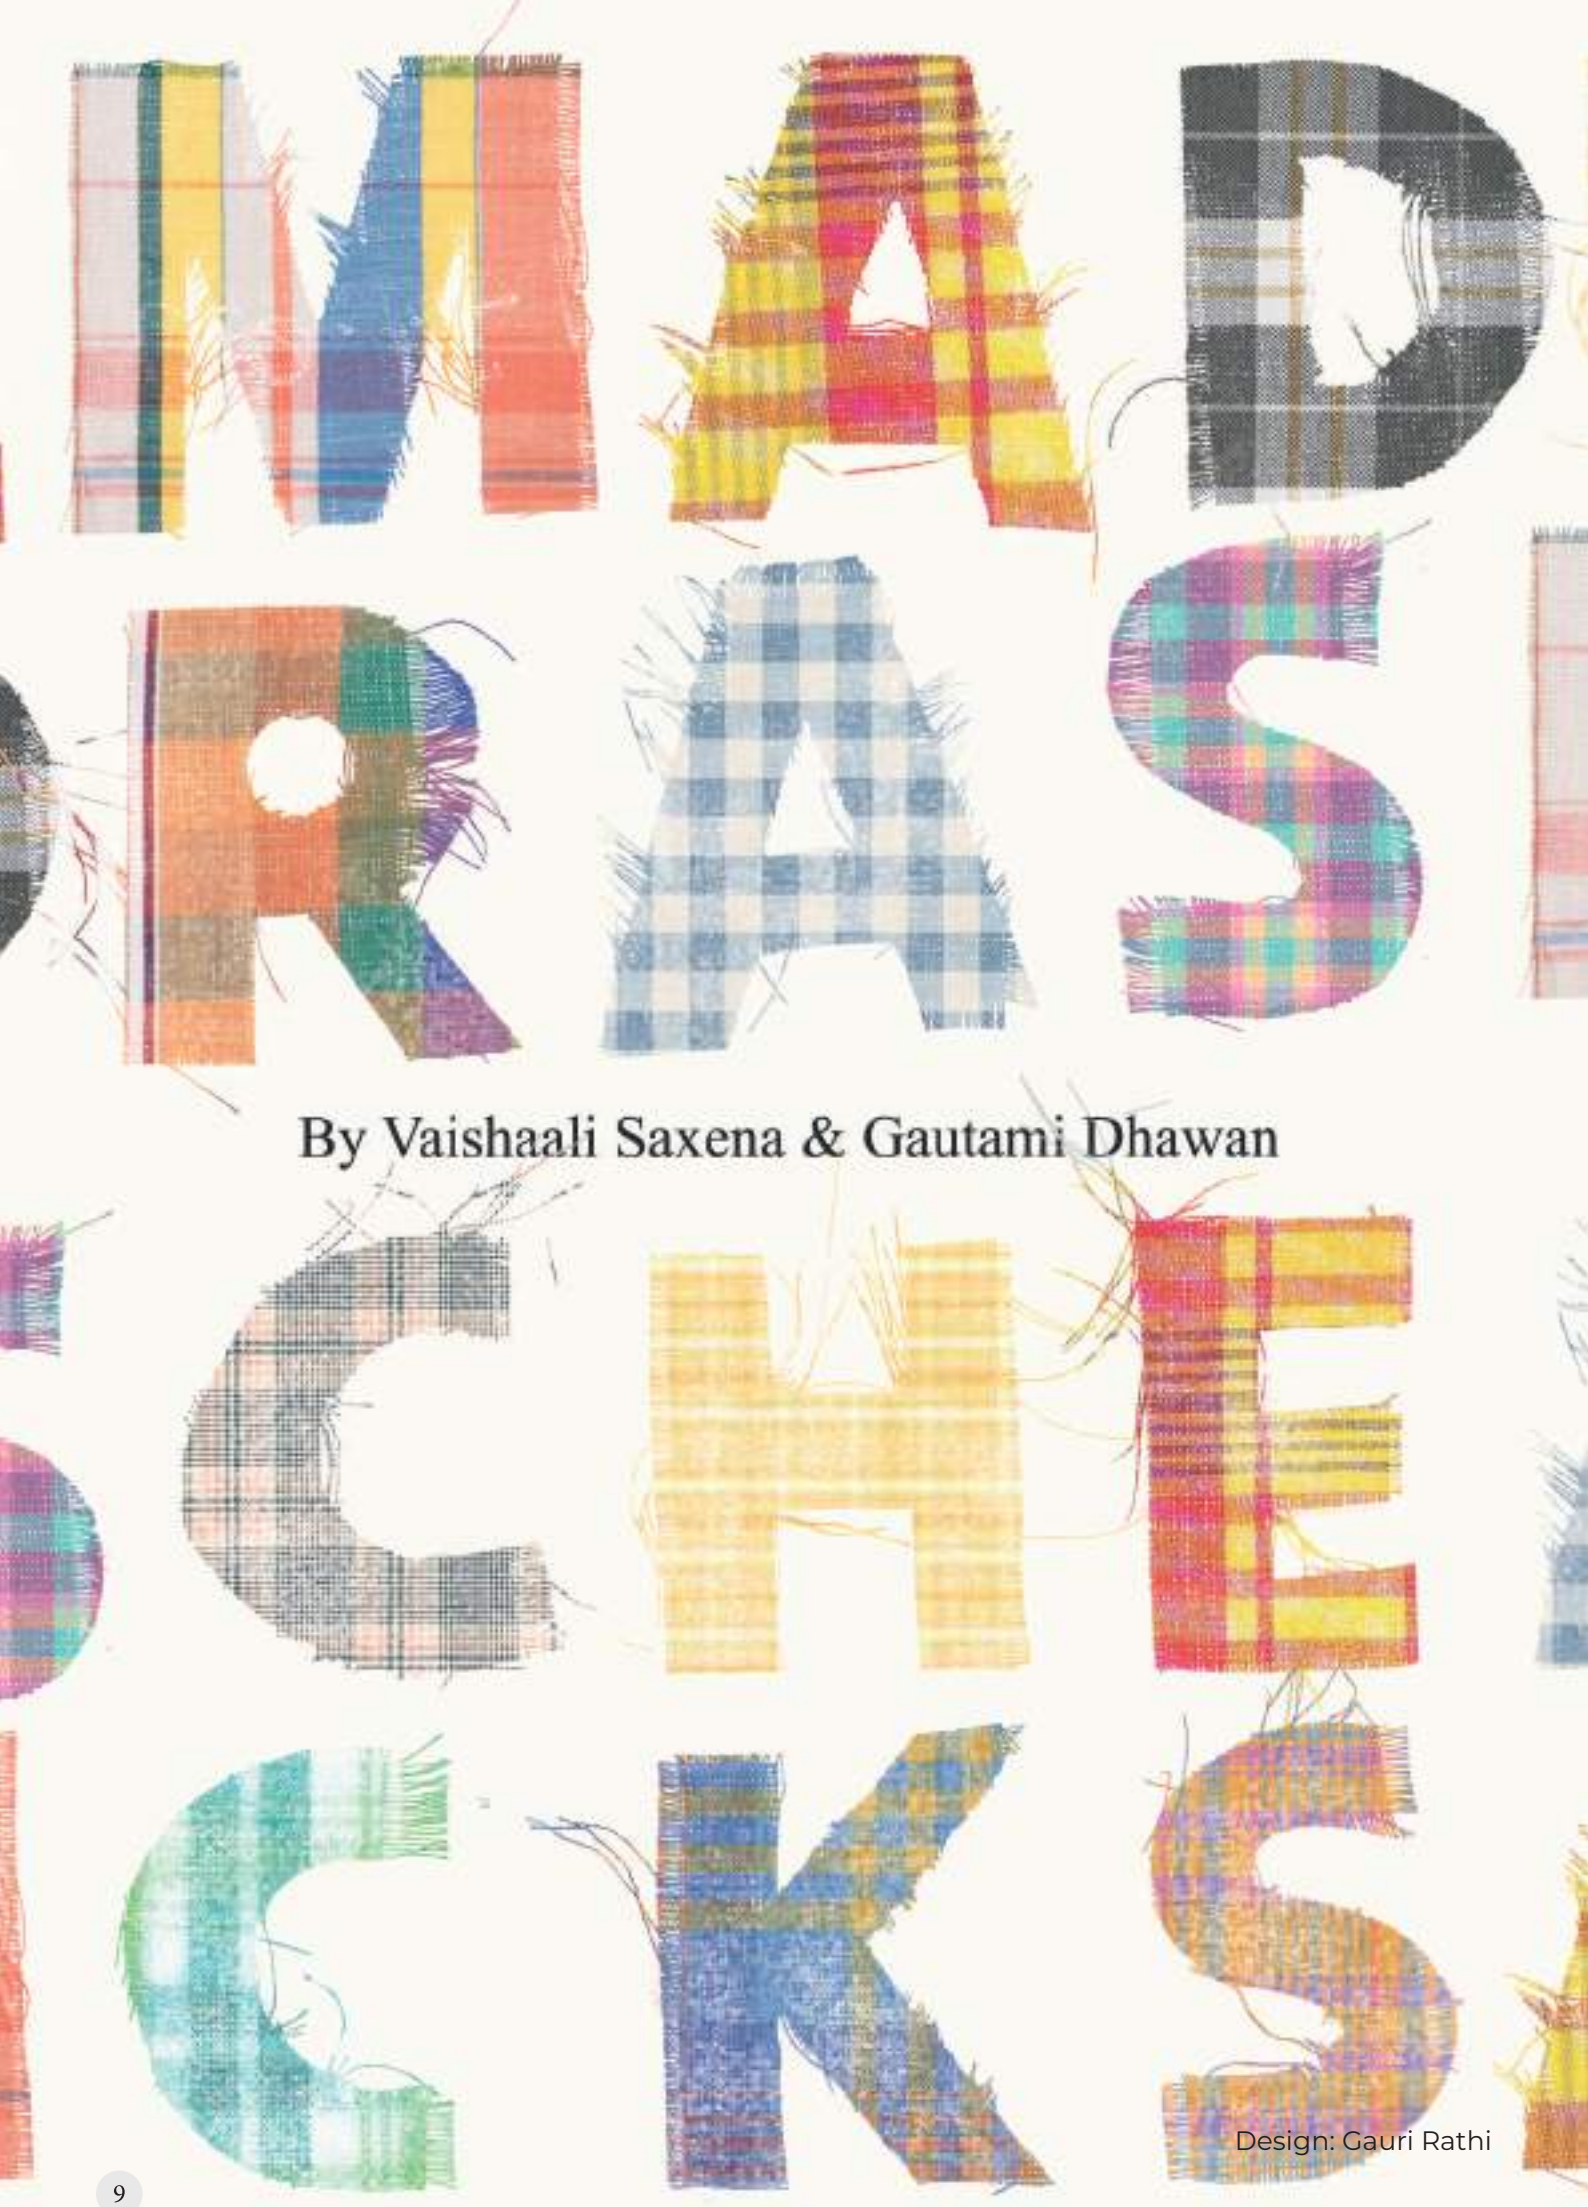

Concept and Direction: Shivani Chiluka
Photography: Abhishek Tommy
Styling Team: Janhvi Kohli, Noyonika Chatterjee and Aonen Imchen
Hair and Makeup: Ritika Makhija
Assistants: Noyonika Chatterjee and Tanmayee Waikar
Models: Sneha Susan and Atoche

MADRAS CHECKS

By Vaishaali Saxena & Gautami Dhawan

Design: Gauri Rathi

Meeting at the checkpoints: Madras Checks and Beyond

So drape skirts are making quite some rounds today. But reverse engineering the entire thing, let's come to what possibly inspired it, say lungi?

Isn't it such an intelligent piece of garment? Keeping all things airy and the cool high. As someone living in or from the South, you must be nodding in pride. But this very fun piece of clothing actually goes way deep into our culture. Despite being a rather simple single cloth-piece, it holds significance and is quite a statement, wonder why? It's THE famous checkered pattern! Aka The Madras Checks. Let's trace their journey!

Going beyond, for something as simple as checks on lungi, it sure was quite a deal, as it is associated to have indicated colonisation with mass production and export kickstarting. It was only a matter of a tad bit till the British East India Company laid its first foot in the country and eyed the lovely Madras Checks fabric.

The block printing was soon replaced by vegetable dyes that were used to dye the yarns, alongside short yarns of cotton being hand carded to bring about a distinct handmade texture. In fact, it's fascinating to note that not only is the fabric distinct from others, but also another piece of itself. Yeah! Since it's purely a work of skilled hands, no two plaids are alike, making each a unique lil wonder.

This beloved piece of garment originating from the soil of Madras was quick to fly to the other ends of the world, first being Africa where it was creatively flaunted as a headwear

This was yet another instance of the Madras Check gaining a higher significance, as it got woven into the Nigerian culture and tradition, where it was recognised and regarded as Injiri –a ceremonial piece of clothing, signifying a soulful connection to their ancestors.

While the Checks effortlessly had quite a take-off, it was specially in the 1950s that Madras Checks soar through the sky, thanks to the brilliant brains of the advertising ace David Ogilvy. William Jacobson, a leading textile importer back in the day, who landed the Madras fabric across the stores of Brooks Brothers, in the whole of wide America. To their surprise, in response came a flood of complaints of colour bleeding (possibly due to the western way of washing).

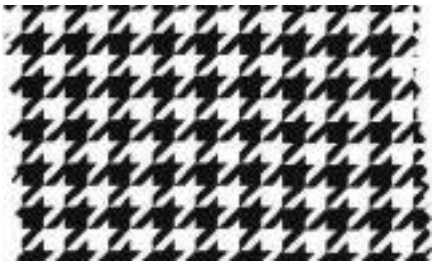

While this could've been it, Ogilvy dodged the bullet by coining "guaranteed to bleed", moulding a defect into a selling point, and turning the tables around. A marketing masterstroke! By the 1990s and early 2000s, the checks reached another point of glory by dazzling on the runway as high fashion. What followed were fashion magazine cover appearances and them making their way into the wardrobes of celebrities and influencers.

Following this rich and fascinating beginning, the Madras Checks has cemented its position in the fashion world by being a glorious and wowed-over element in the collections by fashion biggies like Michael Kors, Gucci, Pero, Ralph Lauren, and more.

The best part? Despite bagging the high fashion badge in the west fashion scene, Madras Checks is innately desi and humble in its roots. Just main character things.

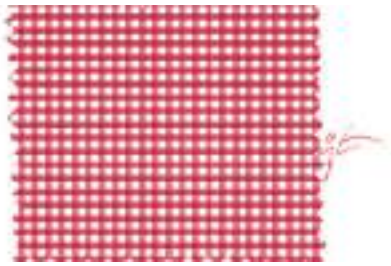

While that was the very filmy-shilmy journey of the Madras Checks, it ain't the end yet, picture (read: checks) abhi baaki hai mere dost. Let's checkout some more checks, mate?

HOUNDSTOOTH

Arguably the most famous one, it won't be an exaggeration when I say this one's one pattern that you'd find everywhere, from malls and down to the cheapest fashion streets. Hosting the iconic contrasting colour duo, black and white, Houndstooth Check is crafted with four of the blacks and whites alternating two over and two under in both warp and weft (horizontally and vertically in layman), ultimately resulting in an abstract, one of a kind of broken check or four pointed shape, hence the name. Zero points on guessing, but traces of this check to go back and down to Scotland, where it originally was made out of tinted sheep-wool.

GINGHAM

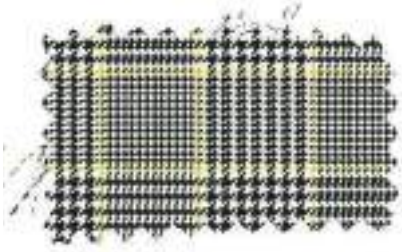

Another (pop)ular one, you may recall this one from the collective pop-culture memory of Dorothy's (the blue gingham dress) in The Wizard of Oz. Gingham is fascinating, with the pattern being reversible and identical on both the sides. A typical two-toned check, with white as a constant pick, alongside the popular blue, black, reds; the Gingham check could go by being the wearable avatar of picnic tablecloths. It is a checked cotton/cotton blend fabric brought to life by dyed yarn woven in a plain weave.

PLAID/TARTAN

Guess aside from the whisky, Scotland's high on checks, because here's another. Glen plaid, or the Prince of Wales check (ikr, fancy), is a play of small and large notched check patterns. Originating from the Glenurquhart Valley of Scotland, it is the twill weave dressed in muted hues and oozes sophistication. It's giving dark academia and boy, ooof!

GLEN PLAID

This one's rich and famous. Fashion geeks name it Tartan, but all drool over it as the Burberry Check. Lines running over each other at 90, their inconsistent widths, distinct colours, and the opaque points of intersection are intricate elements that speak and grab interest. You might also identify these as Plaid, while the two differ in theory, Plaid being a Scottish child, both have largely become synonymous.
Aside from being a Burberry staple, these Tartan shirts are now atop of the hot-trends list, and part of every gen-z wardrobe as flannel shirts. You know, it's just THAT cool!

GLOSSARY

Atelier:
Any fashion designer's workspace.

Usually it's used in the context of a big company.

Barfly Apparel:
Fancy party wear for fancy people ; gowns, little black dresses, etc

Baroque:
Extremely detailed and extravagant fashion, stemming from the Baroque Art movement.

Capsule Wardrobe:
It's the classics ; jeans, little black dresses, white shirts - the essentials.

Couturier:
Baguette for fashion designers. As in, French.

Chic:
A term used to describe sophisticated, classy looks.

Diffusion Line:
An accessible version of a designer's work, sold at an affordable price for the masses.

Distressed:
A rugged, worn out look, like ripped jeans or moth eaten sweaters.

FASHION

Embellishment:
Any embroidery or surface additions that add value to fabric

Kitsch:
A fashion designer's version of the word tacky; garish and excessive.

Baroque:
Out of Fashion, no longer in style.

Capsule Wardrobe:
Clothing bought after you saw it on the runway.

Pret-a-porter:
Simply meaning ready to wear clothing.

Preppy look:
Brands like Ralph Lauren's Polos, chinos, tennis skirts, Sweater

Resort/ Cruise wear:
Lines of clothing launched by designers mid season, like pre-fall,

Sleek Style:
Styles which look slender, or imply grace and fragility.

Content: Gautami Dhawan
Illustrated: Nishtha Piplia and Vedika Kabra

Handcrafted Design

Garment Courtesy: Sanjhi Tailor
Fashion Design
Batch of 2019 - 2023
Craft incorporated: Bobbin lace

Garment Courtesy: Harshit Prajapati
Fashion Design
Batch of 2019 - 2023
Craft incorporated: Machlipatnam Kalamkari

Garment Courtesy: Ria Gupta
Fashion Design
Batch of 2019 - 2023
Craft Incorporated: Bharoon Craft

Concept and Direction: Gautami Dhawan

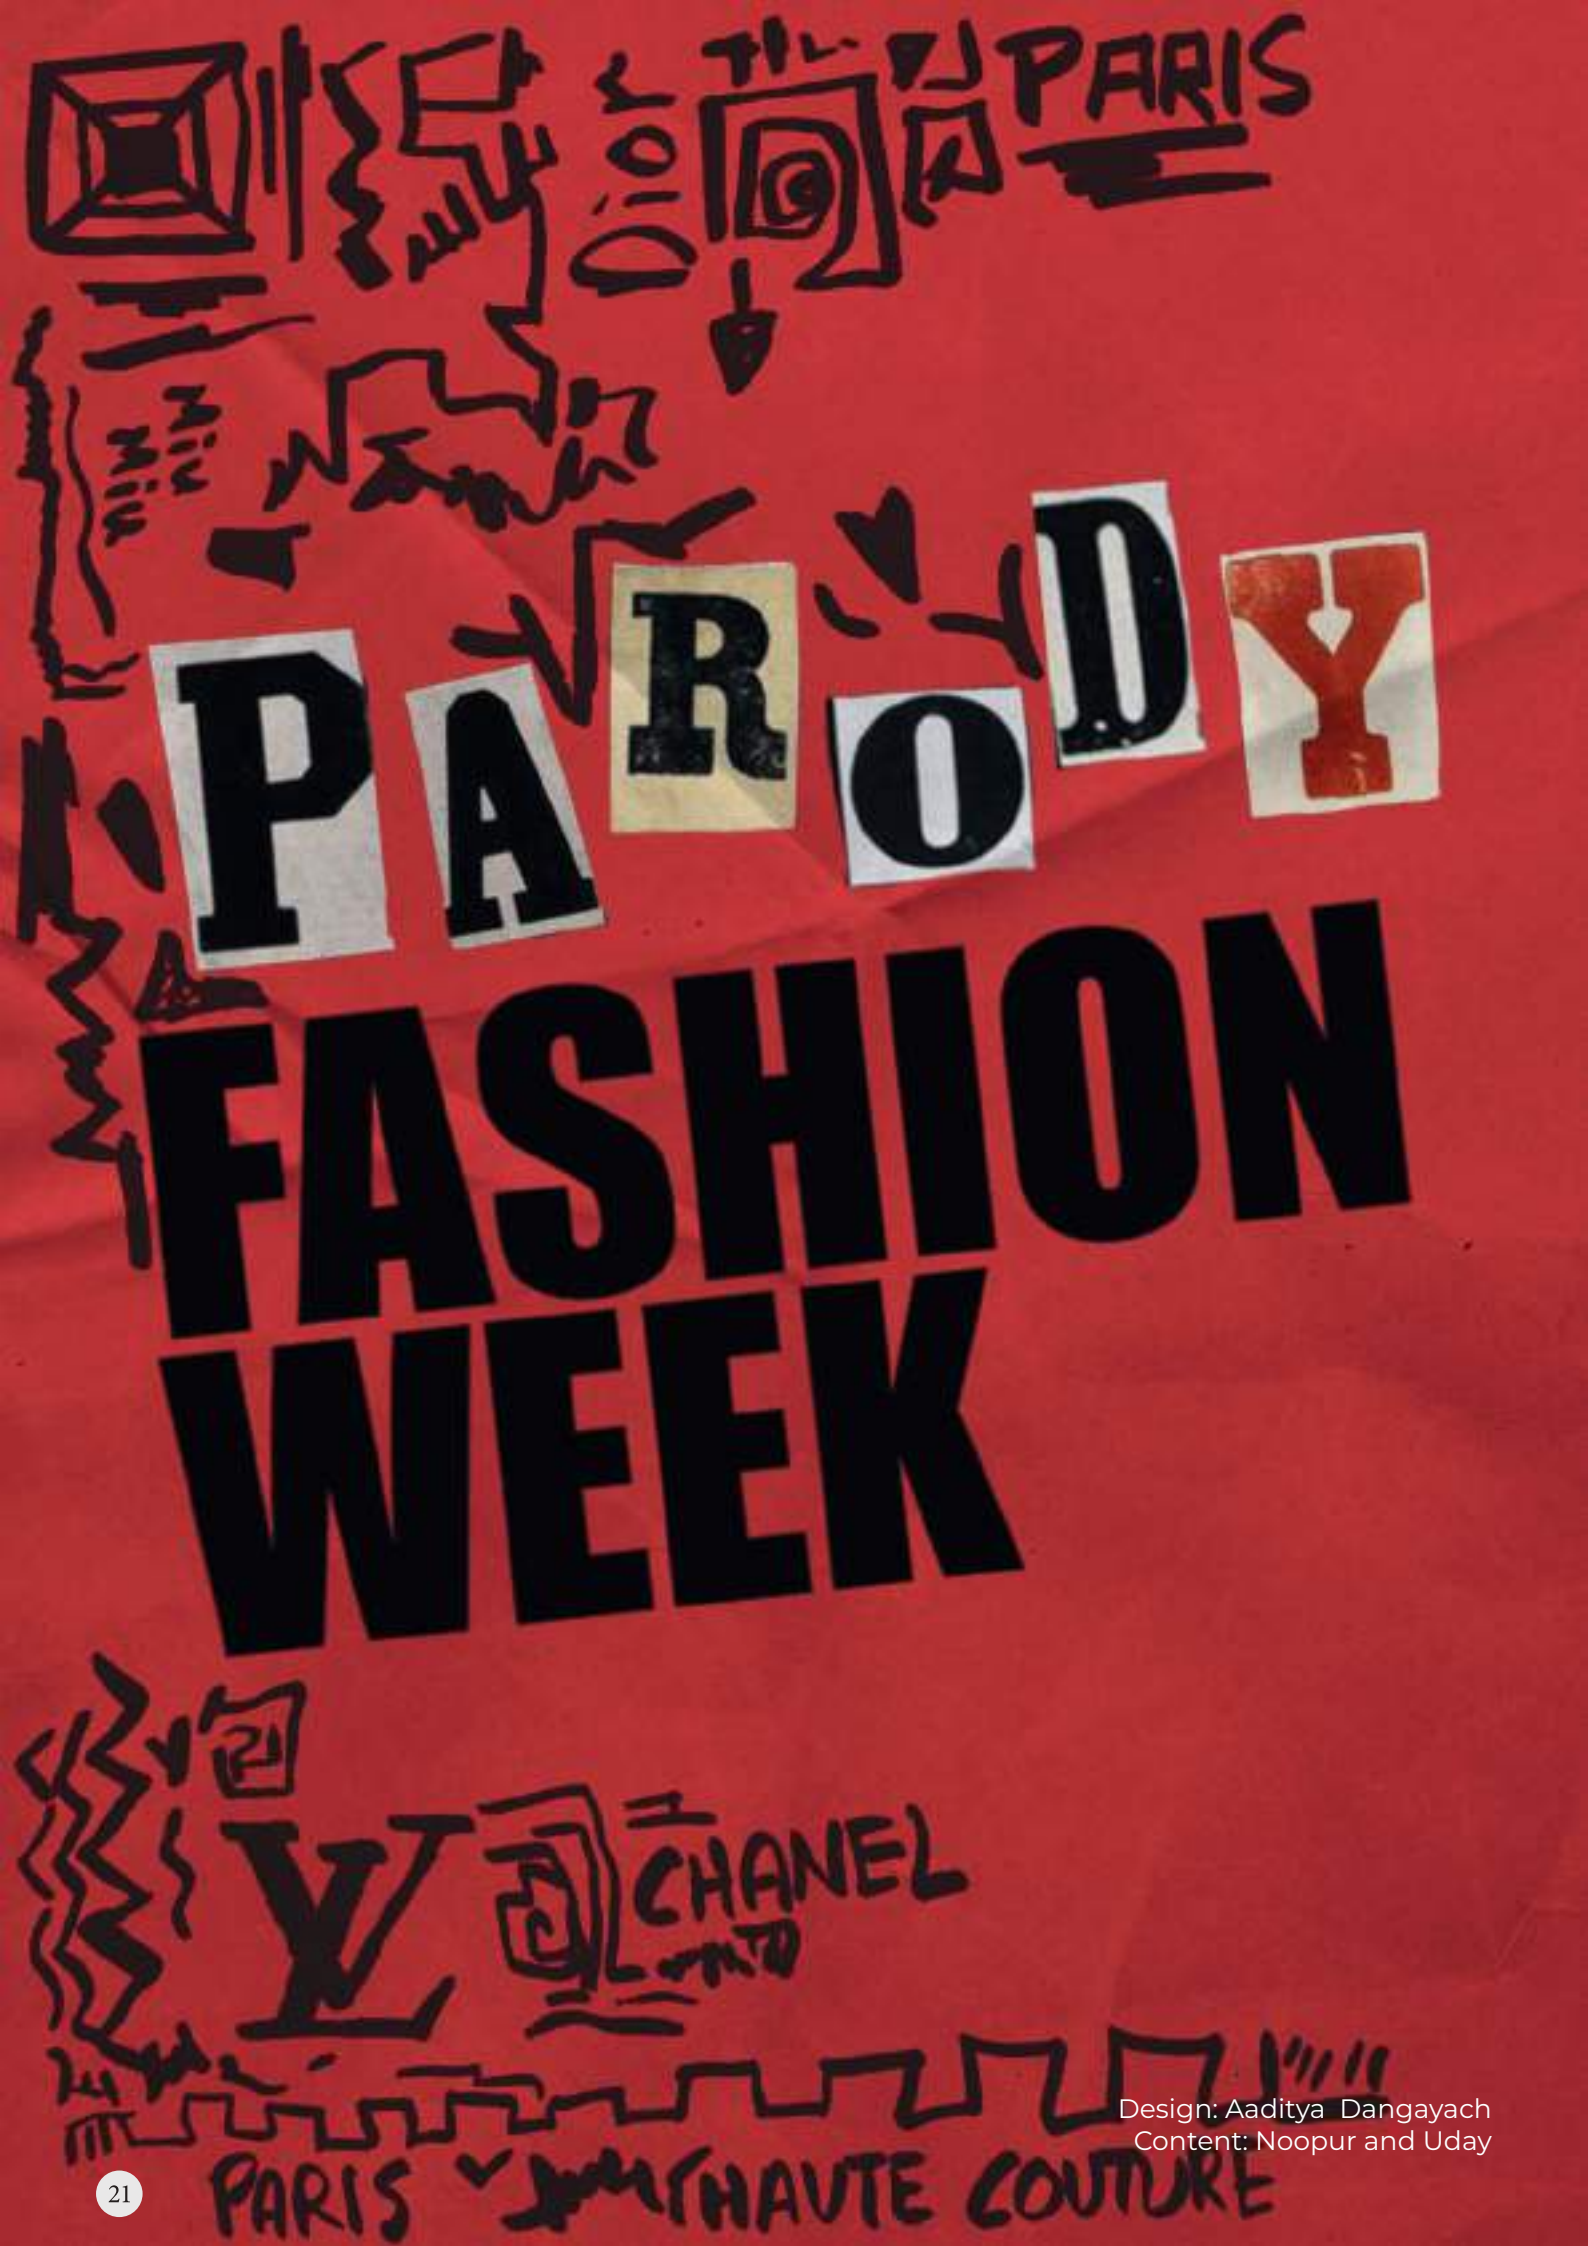

Photography: Tanmayee Waikar

Styling Team: Gautami Dhawan

Hair and Makeup Team: Sharon, Harshit and Gautami

Assistants: Shivani Chiluka and Noyonika Chatterjee

Models: (in order of appearance):
Peehu Jain, Pranav Kher and Geethika Vidyadharan

Design: Aaditya Dangayach
Content: Noopur and Uday

'Gamer' white kid living in his mom's basement

BALENCIAGA

ref: Vogue

Nahi sir main kuch nahi churaya pockets check karlo.

Salmaan Khan from "Tere Naam."

Gru from minions?

Where is my bear???

Balenciaga

How I think I look when I get out of the gym

BALENCIAGA PARIS

What my parents think will become of me when I join a fashion college

The shoes don't work. They should have had eyes on them too.

The hands don't go with the outfit.

This is what I see when I am high

ref: Vogue

Walter Van Beirendonck

Modernised Jaadu

Is the dumbbell going through his brain?

When no food in the world can fill the void in your stomach.

My stomach is a blackhole, it ends space-time continuum

That's how the guy in Demon slayer died!!!

She looks like a heartless thanksgiving turkey ~

V&R

ref: Vogue

Gunshot

When you are too dumb to understand ki dress kahan se pehnu

She looks like a flower jiski stem thodi zyada bhadh gayi hai

Nift Hyderabad students during mosquito season.

Mummy Ka achaar salesman

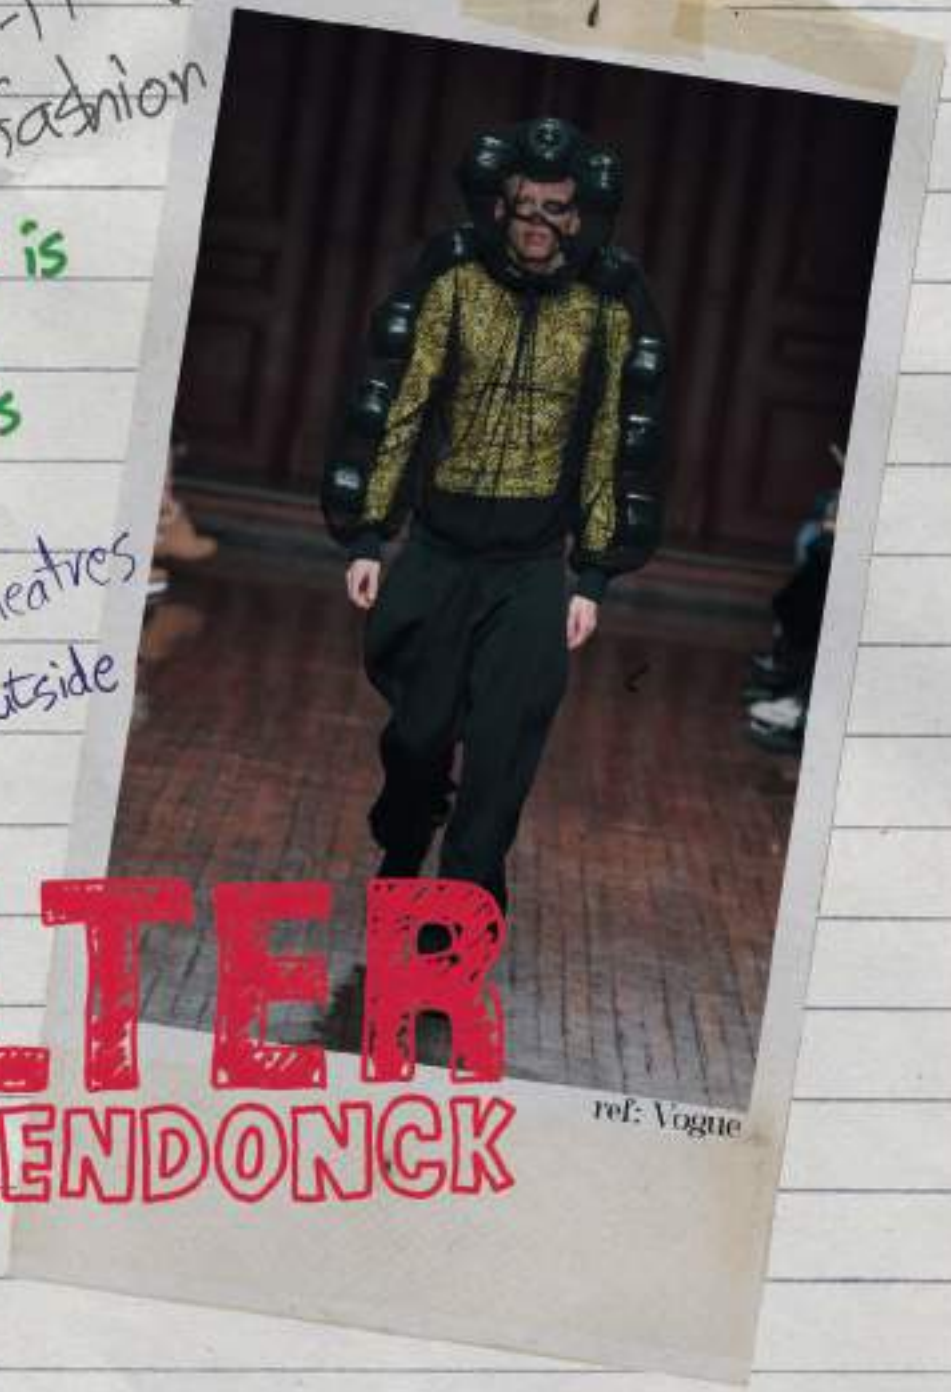

I just really hate bees.

Packing shaadi Ka khaan for dinner

Covid-19 but make it fashion

He looks like he is carrying his alter-ego on his back.

Me when theatres don't allow outside food.

ref: Vogue

WALTER VAN BEIRENDONCK

miu miu

The glasses remind me of chicken little.

The upper body layering is making up for the lower body

ref: Vogue

Stacey's mom has literally got it going on.

Choddi is too expensive to hide

Manny Poko Pants!!!

She looks like a really bitchy

CENSORED

PARENTAL ADVISORY EXPLICIT CONTENT

I think her hands are fake.

To all the NIFT Meals I've Loved Before

In the midst of busy college schedules, hectic assignments and never-ending deadlines; every once in a while a meal comes in the mess that breaks through that monotony. The feeling of dipping a samosa in the green chutney while discussing the afternoon class, or eagerly waiting in line for the vada pav to be refilled, or saying bhaiyya ek aur jalebi please are some memories that we all relate to and will always remember.

MALPUA

'Mere paas malpua hai'

GULAB JAMUN

Ek gulab jamun ki keemat tum kya jaano ramesh babu

JALEBI

Don't underestimate the power of an extra-fried jalebi

SAMOSA

'Kya yaar Pushpaa, I hate sauce with my samosa'

FRENCH FRIES

French fries, naam toh suna hi hoga

VADA PAV

Vada pav uthaa le re baba

DOSA

Vada pav uthaa le re baba

DAHI BHALLE

Deadlines se darr nahi lagta sahab, dahi bhalle khatam hone se lagta

Content: Dhriti and Soumya
Design: Noyonika and Nishtha

The Depths of RC

By Hailey Megh Thomas and inputs from Rashad and Shivani

If you look around for the library at NIFT, you'll find the RC, thereby uncovering the tip of the iceberg that is the Resource Center.

From around ten copies of the same book that will teach you photoshop basics (2003 edition, revised) to giving you a comprehensive relationship counselling session in one sitting, the books in the RC offer you the world. Searching through the ocean of the RC, we encountered inspiringly artistic books that serve as eye candy. Self help books written by some of the most obscure people you've never heard of. Weird titles and weirder content and an abundance of expectations to meet from our seniors' internship and GP documents.

After rummaging through almost all its sections, and spending way too long trying to figure out the movie titles in the film and DVD shelf, we bring to you the Depths of RC; curating some books into a handy reference book you can never reissue.

Much Maligned Monsters:

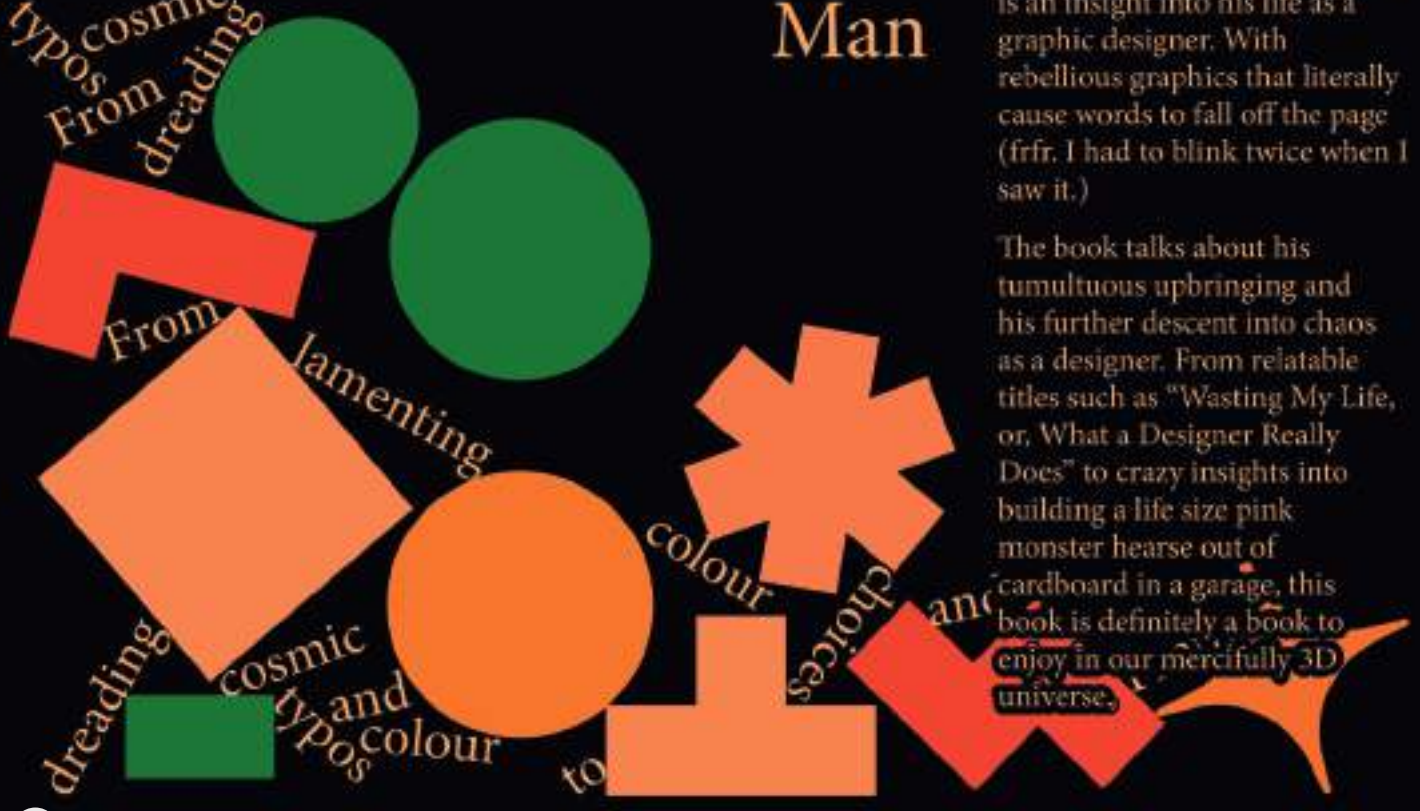

Written by Partha Mitter, Much Maligned Monsters as the name accurately suggests is, in some context, an art history book that throws much needed shade on the English for their incompetence in adopting and understanding Indian culture (cough cough hence causing them to impose theirs on us passive aggressive coughing)

It discusses how the British explorers tried to replicate Indian art through the representation of Indian Gods and Goddesses only to fail miserably and resulting in the creation of half British, half Indian abominations.

He covers all gods, from exotic to erotic (yes, you can pick your fancy wink wink).The drawings are practically indescribable.... oh wait, no, you could actually describe them, like the perfect renaissance figurine with a really bad photoshop.

Or like when you see an AI artwork and the hands are just... not right.

Two Dimensional Man

From lamenting over poor colour choices and typos to dreading the cosmic inferences that operate a scanner, the Two Dimensional Man by Paul Sahre is an insight into his life as a graphic designer. With rebellious graphics that literally cause words to fall off the page (frfr. I had to blink twice when I saw it.)

The book talks about his tumultuous upbringing and his further descent into chaos as a designer. From relatable titles such as "Wasting My Life, or, What a Designer Really Does" to crazy insights into building a life size pink monster hearse out of cardboard in a garage, this book is definitely a book to enjoy in our mercifully 3D universe.

Soviet Space Graphics

Before America won the space race, the soviets were way ahead with their discoveries like vodka, innovations, futuristic visions and extraterrestrial encounters (X-files intro plays in Russian).

The book uncovers various posters created during the space race that gives an insight into global cooperation and exploration in space, oh wait no, it's just beautifully rendered scenes of the might of Mother Russia going into SPACE.

Anime Explosion!

A compilation of articles written by Patrick Drazen about all your favourite anime shows and movies, this book is an inside look into Japanese animation.

The book starts by introducing you to what anime is and what anime isn't (because many would argue over this, like a whole angry, easily offended, stampede of people) then it guides you through the frameworks and ends with discussing the future of anime.

Overall, it's a pretty thick book; you can't just Rasengan and/or Chidori your way through it. If you're an anime noob, this book will up your anime conversation game, as if you weren't enough of a weeb already.

India Bazaar

India Bazaar by Samantha Harrison and Bari Kumar is a graphic publication filled with compilations of vintage Indian graphic posters, advertisements and packaging that remind you of Indian memes, the book has enlightening life hacks on "how to be an Aadarsh Baalak (ideal ward)" to a section dedicated to praising freedom fighters.

The book functions as a time capsule of vintage graphic packaging from "standard fireworks" to "safety matches" with their various, well-illustrated ad campaigns.

Printed in North Korea

Kim Jong Un once said,"The strength of art is greater than a nuclear bomb, unless I launch it into the ocean or EAT it.", now let me just formally state, "yuss girl, periodt."

That's it. That's the book, it's a collection of around 500 prints and illustrations from North Korean artists depicting people going about their daily lives (no threat or state surveillance whatsoever, honest, mummy swear) with quotations on art by Kim Jung Un. Ever wonder what it's like to live in a dictatorship? Apparently it's just the same.

Finally I will leave you all with one last art quote to abide by Kim Jung Un, "An artistic work insensitive to party policy will lose its viability." You heard it folks. Golden words in the industry, and it sounds like something you'd see written on campus.

Unseen Vogue

Unseen Vogue is a compilation of rejected fashion photography that didn't make the cut and got shunned from the main magazine. (We owe Shivani and Rashad overpriced ChaiThadi coffee...)

They are a compilation of works, either too controversial or just imperfect enough for the magazine (it's pronounced as NEh.pOh.tism). Most of these shoots are worth looking at for their artistic style of photography and can fittingly and much annoyingly be found in the reference section of the RC.

The Plentitude

The Plentitude by Rich Gold refers to the unlimited material produced to satisfy a consumer economy with an inexhaustible need for 'want' (sighs in materialism).

With witty cartoons explaining his journey as an artist, designer, engineer and a "faux" scientist the book takes you through Rich Gold's journey as he tried to adjust his life to the insatiable capitalist hivemind (well basically, his struggles with capitalism and the consumer economy, isn't that relatable?). The book illuminates topics of creativity, innovation and the infinite struggle of feeling like a hamster running on a wheel, waiting for the next drop of Glucon-D.

Design: Arya Vishnu

Barbie देखो दिखो

Concept and Direction: Tanmayee Waikar and Mishthi Monga

Photography Team: Abhishek Tommy and Juswin Jacob

Styling Team: Mishthi Monga and Kopal Agarwal

Make-up artist: Aswathi Vinodkumar

Assistants: Shivani Chiluka and Noyonika Chatterjee

Models:
Atocheh, Amrutha Chowdary and Navaneetha Rajeev

THEME LAUNCH

The theme reveal of spectrum 2023 which took place at centre Square on 20th February was a blast filled with Desi Hungama and Rocky Punk!

Picture Credits: Ashutosh

Picture Credits: Ashutosh

* FLASH MOB * FLASH MOB * FLASH MOB *

The Anchors of the event were Sagun Shukla and Nitish Tomar, who did a great job handling the whole event so effortlessly.

The event was marked with an outstanding flash mob performed by students from all the semesters.

Picture Credits: Aman

Picture Credits: Samyak

Picture Credits: Aman

SPECTRUM '23

The theme reveal was marked with a banner drop representing the desiness in the most punky way along with the beats of dholak as our Director Sir pressed the button disclosing the theme "Desi Punk" to the audience.

Belly Dance by Akshara Reddy marked another beautiful performance of the event. Metalok and Esports talk which occured as a continuation of the event explained about the future of Metalok

Picture Credits: Ashutosh

Picture Credits: Vaibhavi

The evening shined even more when artists from the Black Diamond Band showed their beatboxing and rapping talent and resonated an enthusiastic energy.

Picture Credits: Vaibhavi

THEME LAUNCH

Picture Credits: Teja

Picture Credits: Teja

Picture Credits: Aman

Performance by Alok Prakash, Abhishek Vadlamoori and Nitish Tomar rejoiced the theme very effectively.

The ESSE club also explained their 'Trash To Cash' event during the theme launch.

After the vote of thanks by Sagun Shukla and thanking all the spectrum teams by Anwesha, the event ended with a cheerful night as the DJ night began.

The coverage of the events wouldn't have been possible without the Film & Photography Club.

We would also like to thank Hansika Chandrawanshi from the L&D Club.

FILM & PHOTOGRAPHY CLUB

We'd like to thank the following people:

Abhishek Tommy (secreatary of film and photography club)
Juswin Jacob
Vaibhavi Rana
Amanpreet Singh Bumbra
Ashutosh Bajpai
Sara Srivastava
Pranav Ker
Shivalika
Samyak Dhoke

Picture Credits: Aman

Picture Credits: Abhishek

Picture Credits: Abhishek

Picture Credits: Aman

Picture Credits: Abhishek

The second Pro Show themed as Retro Ratri brought back the golden era of Bollywood on the night of 3rd March as the event had been joined by the very authentic band "Purani Jeans" which left the whole centre square mesmerized by its melodious charisma.

The band performed various songs from English to Hindi to evergreen nostalgic hits.
And after a respectful vote of thanks, the most awaited DJ lit up the whole event. And with the amazing host Prutha and Nitika singing off of the event, the show came to an end.

RETRO RATRI

Picture Credits: Pranav

Picture Credits: Abhishek

Red Bull X SPECTRUM

With the art of doodle becoming the main attraction of the event which was sponsored by Red Bull, the third Pro Show for spectrum 2023 was energized by continous power packed performances throughout. The show happened on 13th March and hosts of the event Asmita Amla and did an astonishing job handling the stage so effortlessly.

Picture Credits: Abhishek

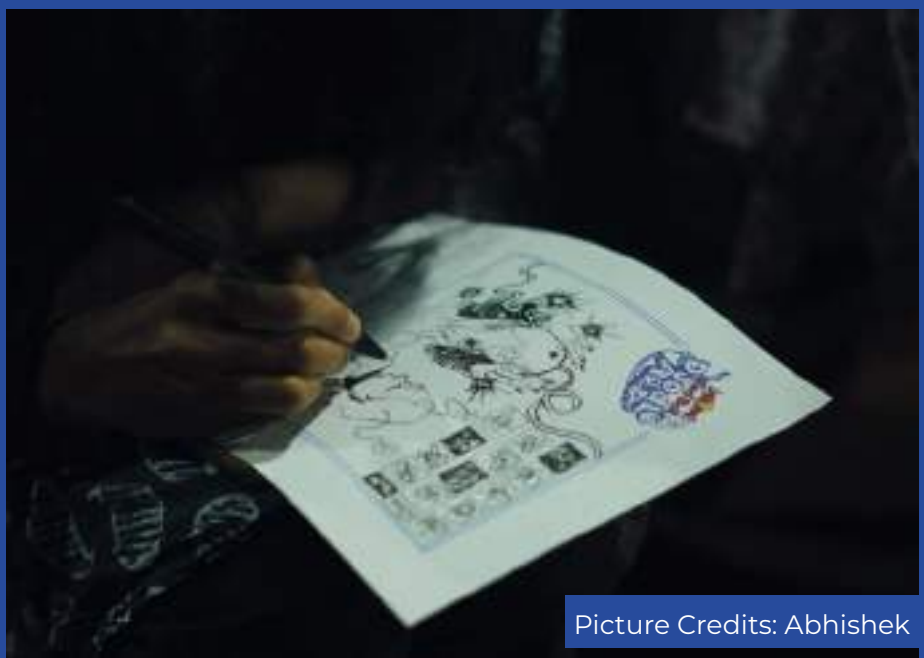

Picture Credits: Ashutosh

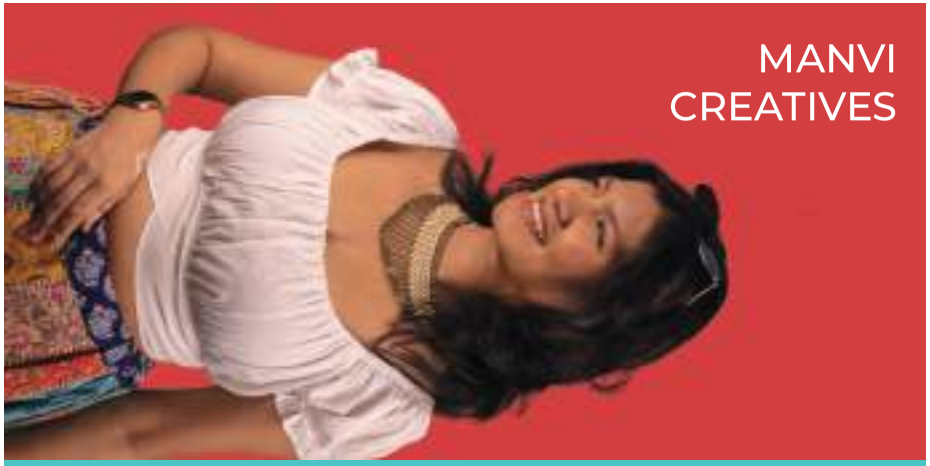

Picture Credits: Ashutosh

The beginning of the show was marked by a soothing song performance by Riya, Kaden and Neike, continued with a stunning group dance. The show went on as a rocking performance by Samyak hyped the audience with his staggering rapping skills. The final performance was marked by Akshara's blistering dance after which the whole crowd dance their soul out in the DJ night.

Picture Credits: Abhishek

Picture Credits: Abhishek

MEET THE

MANVI
CREATIVES

SAKSHI
CREATIVES

SATVIKA
CREATIVES

SUPRAJA
HOSPITALITY

RIYA
HOSPITALITY

VAISHNAVI
FINANCE

SPECTRUM TEAM

MEET THE

ALOK
TECHINCALS

SOURABH
TECHINCALS

ROSHNI
SPONSORS

SOUMYA
SPONSORS

SHIVANI
CAFETERIA

AISHA
CAFETERIA

SPECTRUM TEAM

MEET THE

ISHA
REGISTRATION

SWOSTHI
REGISTRATION

MISHTHI
PRO SHOWS

SREENIDHI
PR

AKANKSHKA
PR

RAKSHITA
PR

SPECTRUM TEAM

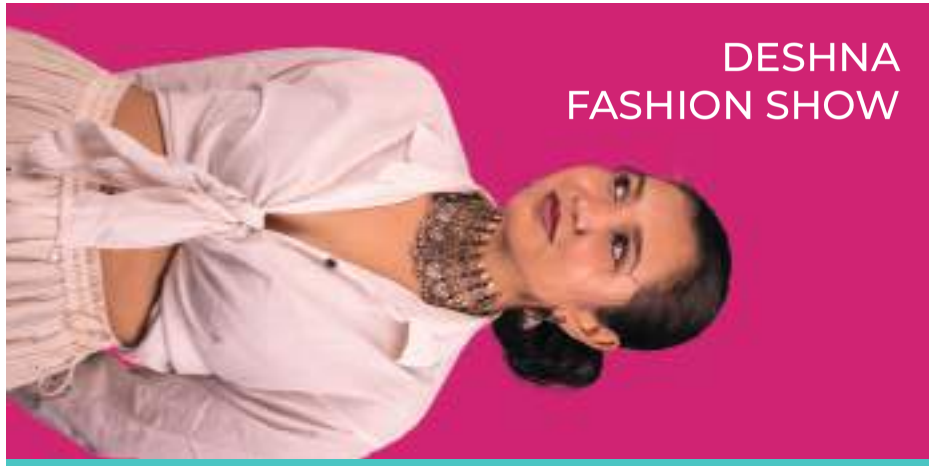

MEET THE

VANSHIKA
SOCIAL MEDIA

SAGUN
CULTURAL

JANHVI
CULTURAL

DESHNA
FASHION SHOW

ANWESHA
L&D

NANDINI
L&D

SPECTRUM TEAM

MEET THE SPECTRUM TEAM

A BRAVE NEW YEAR

IF YOU CAN'T BE HAPPY MIGHT AS WELL BE BRAVE

BY NOOPUR JOGLEKAR AND RASHAD BASSAM

Coming out of the month of December which was full of an especially hard jury season, outstanding mess dues and the much needed two-week breather before we get back in the frying pan, we welcomed 2023. Getting back to a sweltering, longer walk across the construction site, this year did not look any easier.

And to top that off we were reminded of this tradition called the 'New Year's Resolution', which tells us to not just get back to our routine (like we had one in the first place), but make changes for the better while we are at it.

An overstuffed pressure cooker that you forgot was supposed to whistle goes off, and you're left to clean up because, after all, it's you. Reflecting back we realise that at the beginning of 2022, we were still reeling from the pandemic. As a generation that is still processing 2019, it now seems unrealistic to sit and plan the whole year, for if we have learnt anything from the last three years, it is clear that these are uncertain times. This adds more pressure on us which keeps building due to the journal setups, glow-up diaries and 'how to be more productive' videos resurfacing on the internet.

This might be one of the few reasons why 9 out of 10 Niftians admit to not having a New Year's Resolution in 2023. "Last year, I was motivated about making resolutions, I was reading Atomic Habits and was really into self-help books. I thought these resolutions would help me accomplish my goals and my life would be awesome and perfect," said Priya Mishra, a second-year fashion communication student at NIFT, Hyderabad.

Design: Ashish
Content: Noopur and Rashad
Illustrations: Lavanaya and Shivani

She then confessed to losing track of her resolutions after a month, but life seemed okay. Being described as overwhelming, unrealistic and another dead end following the road of procrastination, a relic of 2018 in a post-label world Gen-z seems to be viewing the New Year's Resolution as a failed experiment that just makes them feel bad about themselves.

As the world moves faster than ever, where every day brings a new challenge, it feels important to keep ourselves updated and on track. Thus, we keep searching for better ways of pushing forward... We end up turning to that Tiktok that reassures you about how it's okay to not be okay. Well, the self-help media, a 13.2 billion-dollar juggernaut of workout reels and youtube podcast shorts detailing exactly which new standard you must improve to, is packed with promises of perfection.

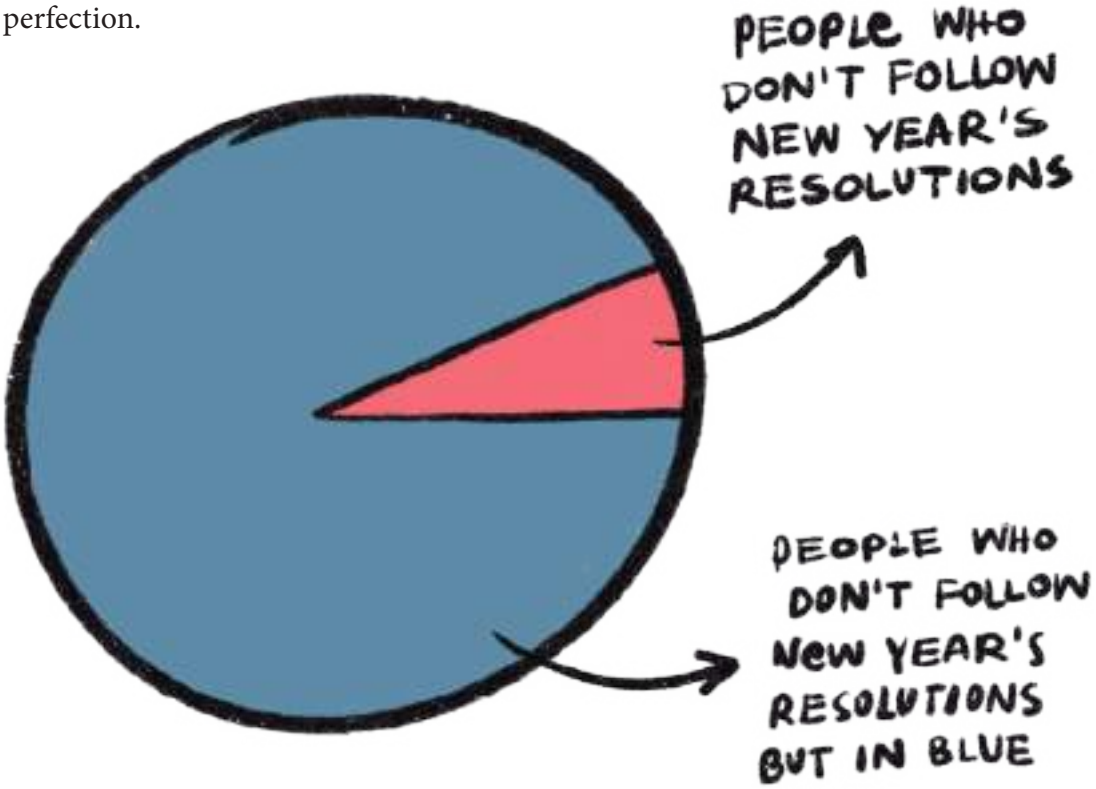

While these might help a few, it is important to remember that this media is designed to make you consume more than follow.

Thus, many spend time, money and energy reading or listening to self-help books and podcasts than they spend trying out the pieces of advice they offer. Some tend to forget that these bits of advice aren't for everyone and continue forcing themselves into schedules that don't work for them. This ends in burnout and people feeling even worse about themselves than they did before.

The same applies to New Year's resolutions, which is another way of self-improvement. Figuring out if it works for you or not and personalising this method if needed, takes time and patience.

Otherwise, you might just find yourself celebrating 'Quitter's Day' (yes, we were today years old when we found out) on the second Friday of January, already feeling like a failure. Saving themselves from getting guilt-tripped, this generation seems to have started a new tradition of figuring out their own style of growth rather than enforcing someone else's. Mentioned below is a closet full of tips, tricks and tutorials along with a few dos and don'ts, picked from the brains of students at NIFT, Hyderabad. with a few dos and don'ts, picked from the brains of students at NIFT, Hyderabad.

January might have been tough, but it's long gone now; so maybe try giving March a chance?

PIE CHART REPRESENTATION OF GEN Z

VENTING ABOUT THE

It was four days before Holi last year that my battle with the vending machine began. With mid term assignments of our suddenly offline classes in full swing, walking through the heat to the vending machine after class to have a nice cold drink had become something to look forward to. As a Punjabi, that lassi had become more than just a chilled drink to combat the heat; it was a connection to home, an alternative when I couldn't get maa ke Haath ki lassi some 867 kms away from home.
Scan-> tap the third item on the bottom right -> grab the lassi while propping myself against the door had become muscle memory by now. But that day, my hands swiped through thin air. Confused, I reached down to peer against the glass and saw that the lassi had been replaced by a chocolate bar.

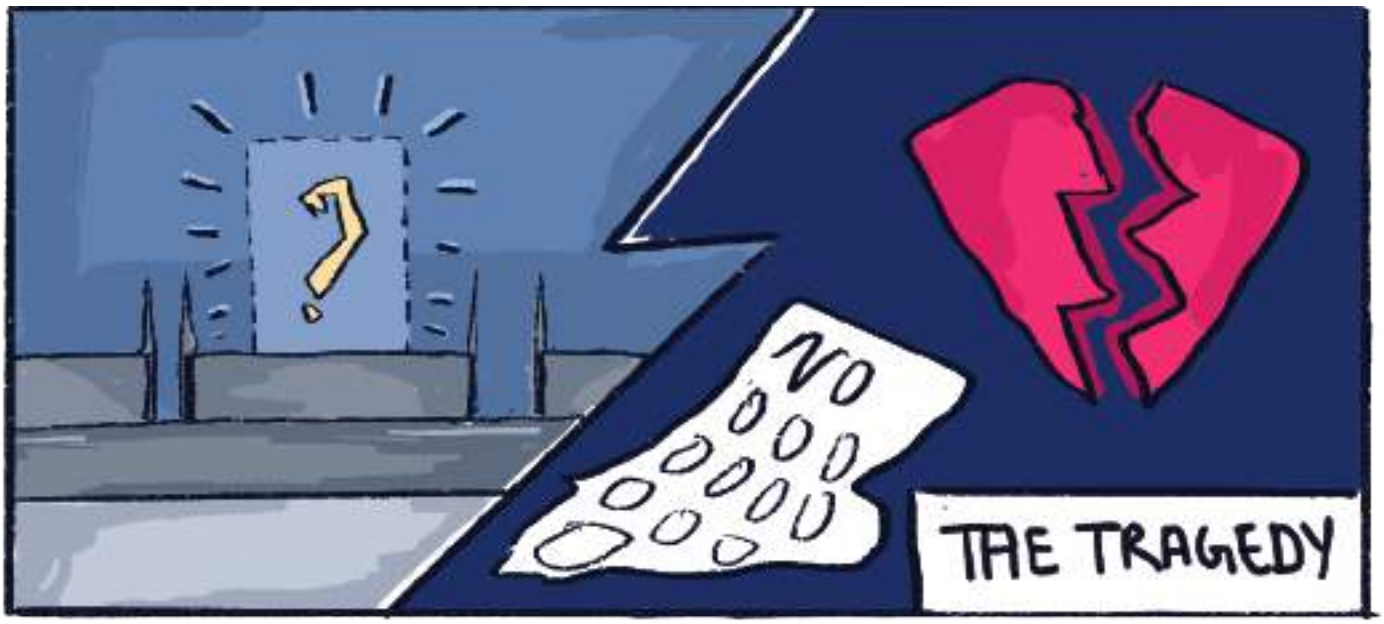

I came back the next day in the hopes that it would be there (maybe it was out of stock And they'll bring it, I consoled myself) but the Snickers stayed. And the lassi never came back. I remember writing strongly worded emails twice to the company, and even waiting for the employee who came at 11:56 am to refill the machine every day, so I may put in my request for the lassi in person. Sadly, I have yet to hear a reply. Things have been downhill since. From Vaseline to Valentine's chocolates, there seems to be a vendetta against the snackers.

The most random items seem to arrive on the shelf and stay with a vengeance. For 4 am cravings and all-nighter assignments, (at a time when 24/7 had yet to exist) the vending machine had become a saviour. It seems like everything that begins to sell instantly gets the boot, never to be seen in the machine again. For a machine whose whole objective seems to be selling stuff, removing their best-selling items seems to be counter-intuitive.

VENTING MACHINE

Putting heart chocolates in the weeks leading up to valentines seemed to be especially cruel, particularly for the heartthrobs who have no college romance of their own. The flashy poster on the side just added insult to injury. For how long must we live like this, forced to pick from the limited options decided for us by a larger corporation??

For how long will they continue to deny us and not listen to the opinion of the masses? “please pick up your item” “please close the door” that monotonous voice has begun to appear in my fever dreams..

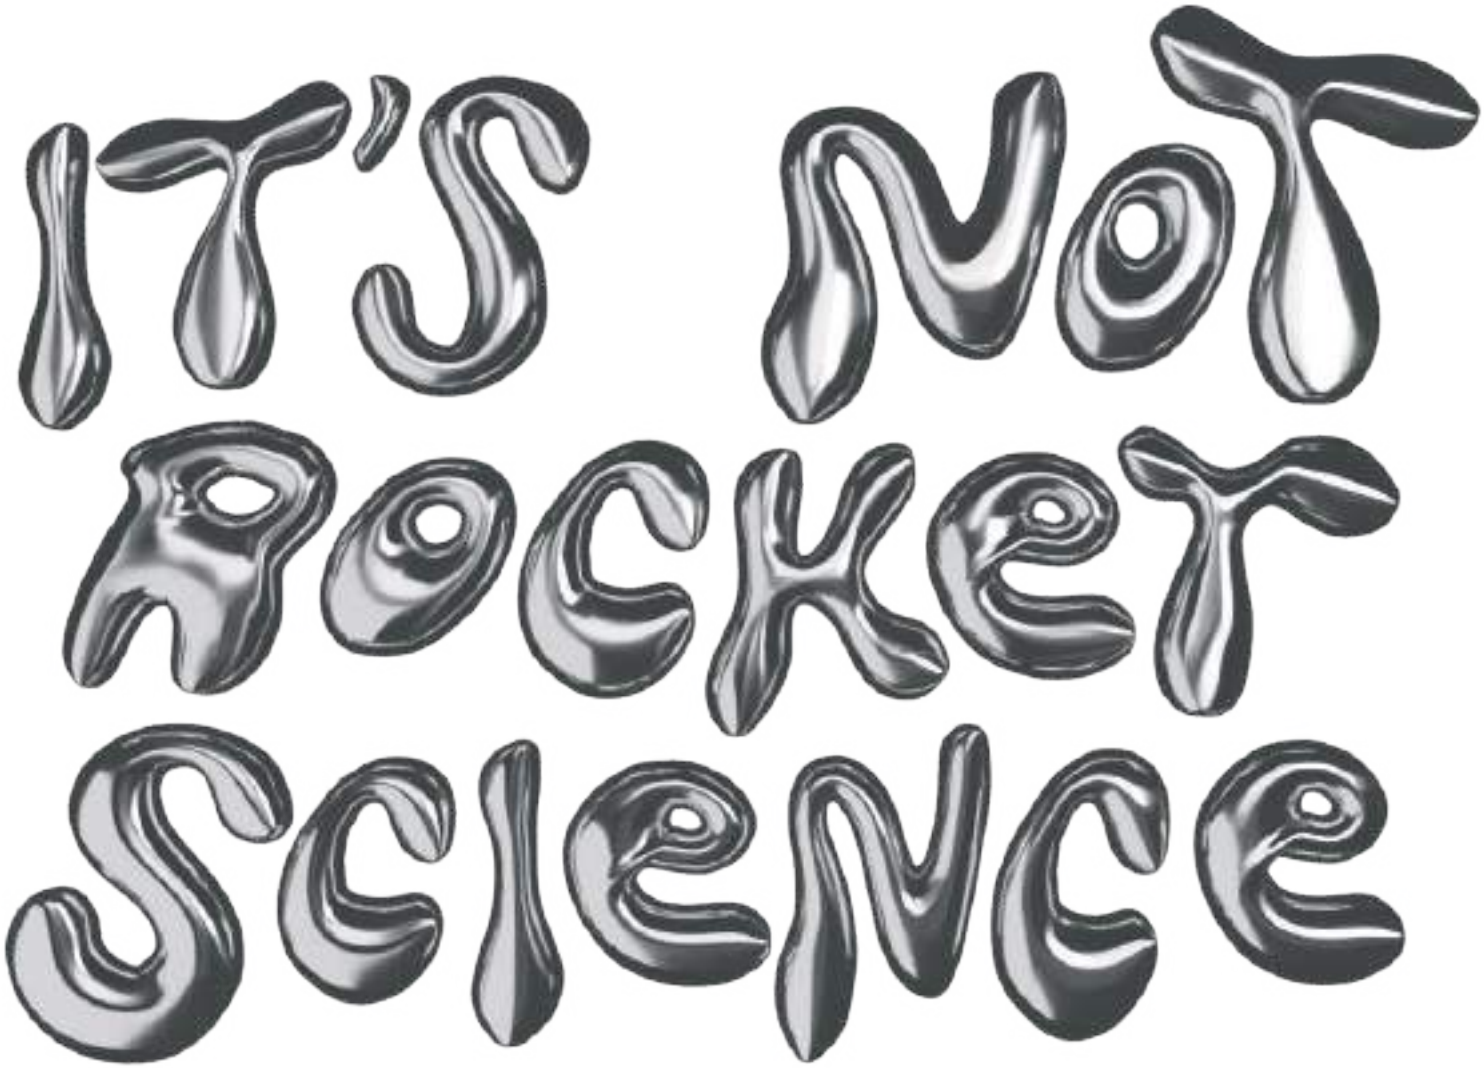

We’ve become so dependant on it.

Content: Dhriti Verma
Design: Lavanya Roy and Ashish

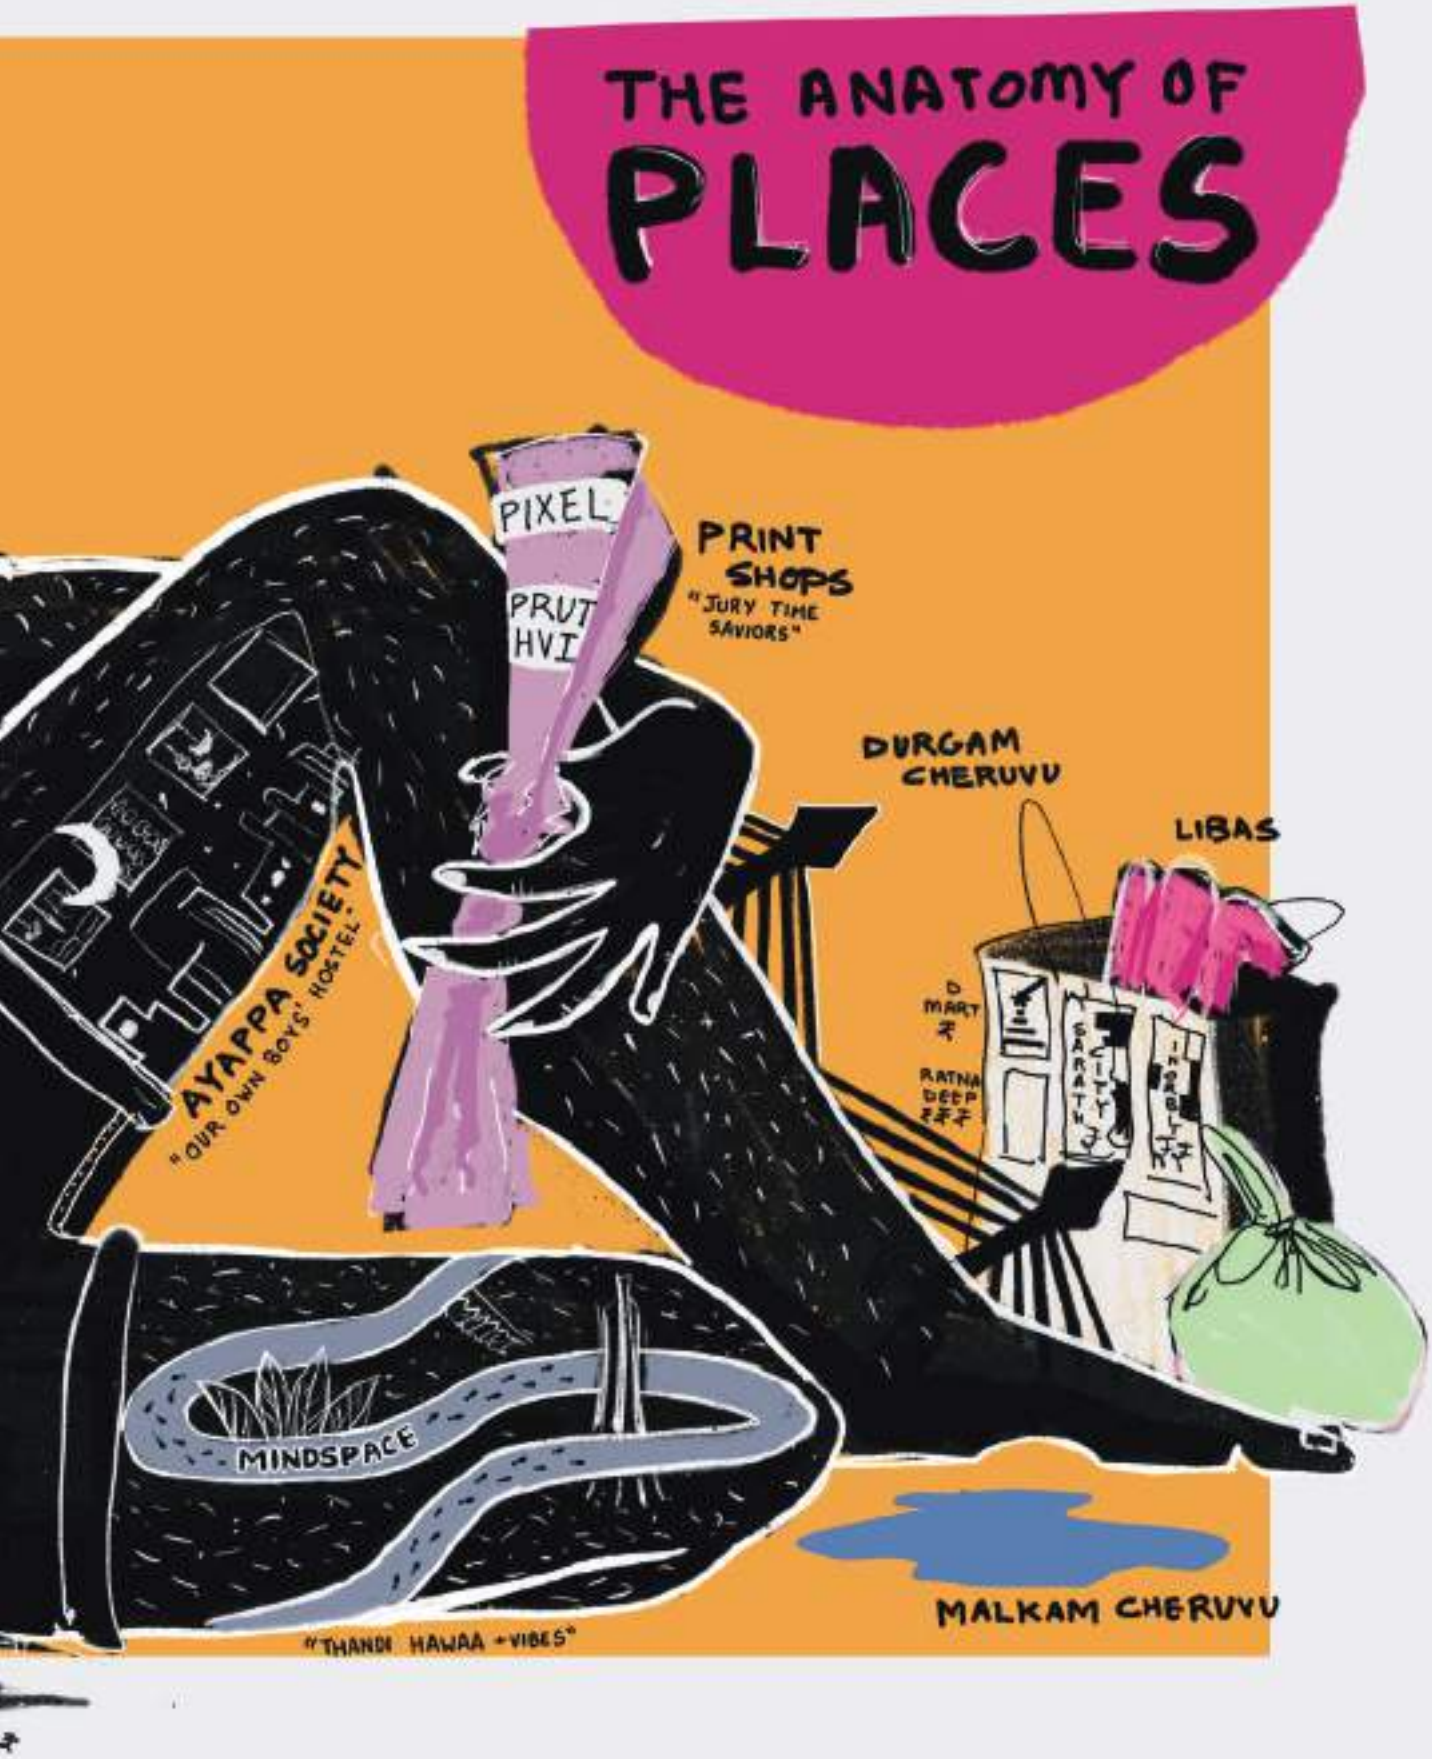

Concept and Direction: Kopal Agarwal
Photography Team: Juswin Jacob and Abhishek Tommy Styling Team: Kopal Agarwal and Aonen Imchen
Hair and Makeup: Ritika Makhija
Assistants: Aaditya, Shivani and Tanmayee
Models: Nilaanjana and Mabel
Title Credits: Jouhar Palakkal and Shivani Singh

"GROUP PROJECTS"
IKEA
"LATE NIGHT CRAVINGS"
24 SEVEN
IKEA
"FREE AC"
PVR
₹₹ CULT FIT
₹₹₹₹
GOLD'S GYM
"FIRST AFTERPARTY"
PRISM
"PRE EVENT ETHNIC SHOPPING"
SHILPARAMAM
FOOD
"NIFT KA HANGOUT"
RAM KI BANDI
MANDIN
STREET FOOD
MEHFIL HITLER
SUTTA
PUBLIC MILLS
NIRVANA
NATURALS HAIR AND BEAUTY SALON
+MEDICOVER+
++PACE++
+MOR+
₹₹
"GO TO USE HEALTH CARD"
₹₹₹
"NOT IN YOUR BUDGET"
₹ HAVMOR KARACHI ₹
BAKERY

Content: Dhriti Verma
Design: Nishtha Piplia

Meet the Magazine Team

"Details of your incompetence do not interest me"- Noyonika

"Looks like a cinnamon roll but could kill you" - Shivani Chiluka

Editorial Team

"I'm childish like gambino"
- Aaditya

"Haha , very witty line"
- Arya Vishnu

"Chewing gum in the shower"
- Tanmayee

[Loud internal yelling]
- Lavanya roy

"Happy always."
- Vedika Kabra

"Party. - Adore Delano"
- Nishtha Piplia

"My parents live in Ghaziabad, but I live in the moment" - Ashish

" ..-. ..- -.-. -.-"
- Gauri

Design Team

"If no one from the future came to stop you, then how bad of a decision can it really be" - Dhriti

" Alan Sitter"
- Leeza

"I almost always react with a thumbs up" - Shivani Singh

"Outside I skrrt skrrt but inside I hurt hurt" - Rashad

"I drink chai because I can't afford therapy :)" - Noopur

"bhai sahab, aap convince ho gaye hain ya main aur likhun?" - Vaaishali

"My alter ego's named Chad"
- Hailey

""Nice onli"
- Gautami

Content Team

"The girl of your dreams to me is a fan"
- Asmita

"I'll be a meow meow in my next life."
- Gurnoor

" Don't wish for it, work for it"
- Gunjika

"Gaslighting is just Cognitive Behavioural therapy" - Uday

"My assignments aren't done, but I sure am." - Aonen

PR Team

Photography Team

"I'm just trying to live life for the moment" - Juswin

"My mind is going a mile an hour"
- Abhishek

Faculty

Jyotirmai Singothu
Associate Professor

K. Anant Phani
Associate Professor

Gajam Rajesh Kumar
Associate Professor

huber &holly

Hoco Eatery. C9WP+C73,
Hitech City Rd, VIP Hills, Silicon Valley, Madhapur, Hyderabad, Telangana 500081, India.
Metro Pillar no: 1766

HŌCCO
eatery

TASTY ELEMENTS
As Per Your Taste

