
6th EDITION
meraki
* TITLE GOES HERE *
NIFT HYDERABAD

DIRECTOR'S NOTE

It is with great pleasure that I welcome you to the much-anticipated sixth edition of our esteemed college magazine, Meraki. As custodians of creativity, we find ourselves immersed in the world of fashion, design, and art, each edition a testament to the boundless talents within our academic community.

The theme for this edition, encapsulates the essence of our collective journey. In the realms of artistic expression, the process is often as important as the final creation. This edition beckons us to embrace the intricacies inherent in the act of unraveling ideas, finding inspiration, and navigating the uncharted territories of creativity.

As we peruse the pages of Meraki's sixth installment, we witness the convergence of diverse perspectives, innovative designs, and thought-provoking artistry. It is a showcase of the relentless pursuit of understanding, a testament to our students' ability to traverse the complexities of their chosen disciplines.

I extend my deepest appreciation to the contributors, whose dedication and talent have breathed life into these pages. May this edition of Meraki inspire and motivate our academic community to persist in the noble pursuit of "Figuring It Out."

With regards,
Shri Vijay Kumar Mantri, IAS

Title goes here 01

500081 Reasons I Miss Home 04

Hidden Horrors: Unmasking Animal Cruelty in the Makeup Industry 09

20 Non Mess-y Places To Eat From 12

NIFT Bingo 15

Sigmund undresses me 16

In the defence of today's concert culture : From the pov of an underprivileged Gen Z* 27

Thrifting is getting saturated: Here's how. 28

Renaissance of the Indian Queer Narratives 32

Maya in the Midnight Laundry Madness 37

Fashion Museums Around the World: A Tour of Couture History. 50

Events: A Lookback 47

Meet the Team 51

THEME NOTE

TITLE GOES HERE

BY SANJANA BHERI

Hum hain naye toh andaz kyon ho purana?
Here we are, back with the 6th edition of Meraki and this edition's theme is – Wait, did we forget to type that in? Oh, that's on purpose. Okay! Guess we're still figuring that one out!

Have you ever experienced this feeling that you're unsure about your future? You may not even have a plan ready, but you are just ready. Ready to face all the challenges life throws at you. Ready to confront the good, the bad and the ugly world filled with dangers you are warned about.

Ready to gain every new experience. Just ready for it all...?

Not having a solid plan and facing each day as it comes may even help pave your road to success as you take time to introspect, to get inspired, and to seek what fans your flame.

Going with the flow without any fixed plans might help pave your road to success. Because then you get to introspect, get inspired, and seek what fans your flame.

Like Sid's character has a transforming character arc in Wake Up Sid from "who cares ki kal kya hoga as long as we have some fun tonight" to "Main jaanta hoon mujhe kuch nahi aata. Pata nahi kon naukri dega, par ab mujhe kaam karna hai bas."

In the end of the day, nobody has it all planned out. Everyone is figuring out something or the other happening in their lives. Change is the only constant in life which is rightfully said in Zindagi Na Milegi Dobara, "Seize the day my friend ... pehle is din ko poori tarah jiyo, phir chalis ke bare mein soochna"

Even our magazine is in our teen years. Still comprehending, interpreting and expanding our team. One might even say "coming of age" just like the movie posters in the magazine's front page. This time, we are here to explore, to experience and to find answers: Why are we here? What is our purpose? Where do we find happiness? And we added the flavour of playfulness to this process of seeking. You just need to have the thirst to quench your drive for finding your why.

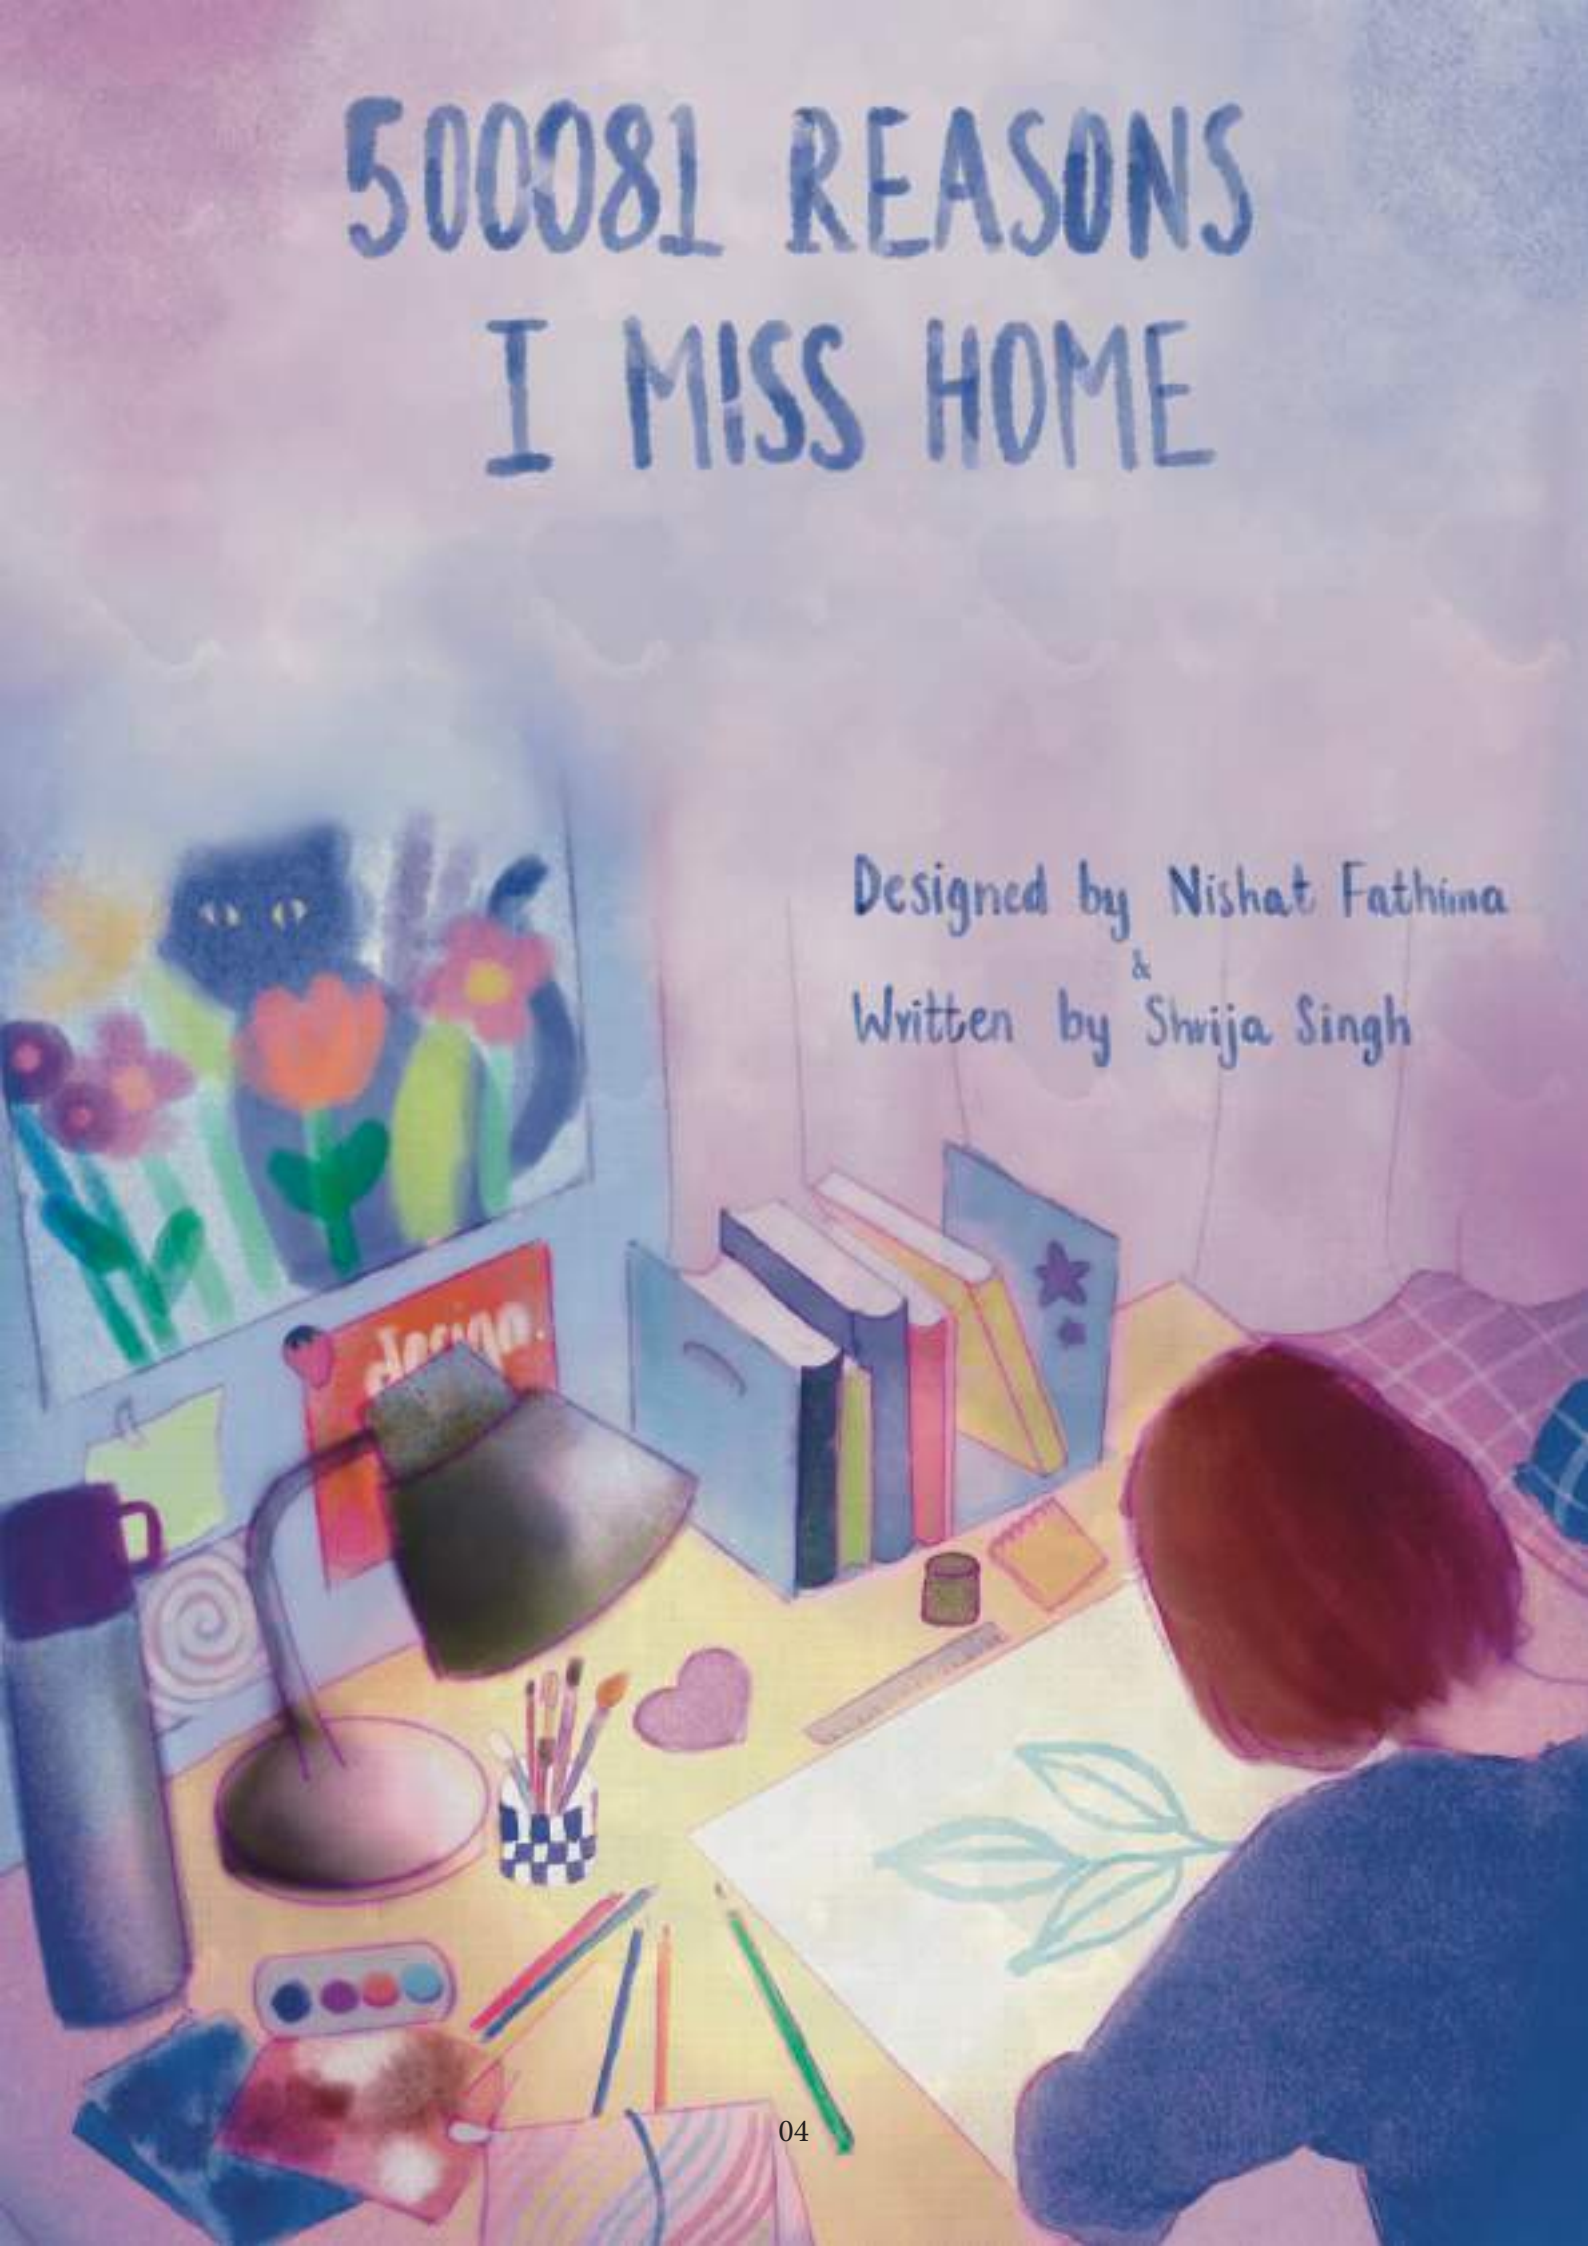

Everything happens for a reason and the universe has a way of leading you to where you are supposed to be. At the moment you are supposed to be here. So sit back, give yourself some time and savour this edition to feel inspired!

Concept by- Pranav, Priya and Noopur
Art direction by- Pranav, Priya, Noopur and Samhita
Photographed by- Priya and Noopur
Styled by- Rishika
Modeled by- Rishika

500081 REASONS I MISS HOME

Designed by Nishat Fathima
&
Written by Shwija Singh

The hot steam of the coffee touched my face ever so gently, countering the cool breeze coming through the window of a new November day as I sat in my bed with my make-do coffee in my favourite cup. The warmth of the hot beverage reminded me of Mum's soft touch on my forehead as she'd wake me up every morning, and her quick steps as she'd move through the entire house trying to get everyone's day started. And Papa with his cup of tea every morning and how he'd lay a plate of fruits down in front of me, smiling. Till the very last day of school, he'd drop me off at the bus stand. Now here I was, doing everything on my own from laundry to dishes to cleaning the room, but I think all of these tasks that I probably overlooked all my life have given me some of the control I've craved for so long.

On my way to class, I saw familiar faces, smiling, frowning, laughing, half-asleep. I somehow felt both fulfilment and emptiness. We had all found our people here, we had to some extent found ourselves here. But I couldn't help but miss pieces I had to leave behind. How the inexplicable sad and cold evenings were made better by the comforting embrace of friends I'd known my whole life. Comforting walks on dewy grass with the constant laughter of kids in the background, have now turned into late night snack runs with people I met months ago but have made me feel like I've known them for years.

During lunch, among all the chatter and chaos I heard a very familiar laughter and caught my breath. It couldn't be possible. I still turned around to check if it was. My best friend hadn't magically appeared behind me, no matter how I wished it was true, it wasn't. That laugh was so similar to hers. I missed her so much. I talked to her yesterday. She knew everything about my life here and I knew everything about hers. It wasn't like we were drifting apart, she was stuck with me forever. But that very specific feeling of sitting in bed with her, doing absolutely nothing came back to me and made my heart ache a bit. At least there was some satisfaction in knowing that those late night calls spent on discussing everything we wanted to achieve in life weren't in vain. She was doing what she had always wanted to what she had always wanted to do, I was where I had always wanted to be. Wasn't that all we ever wanted for each other?

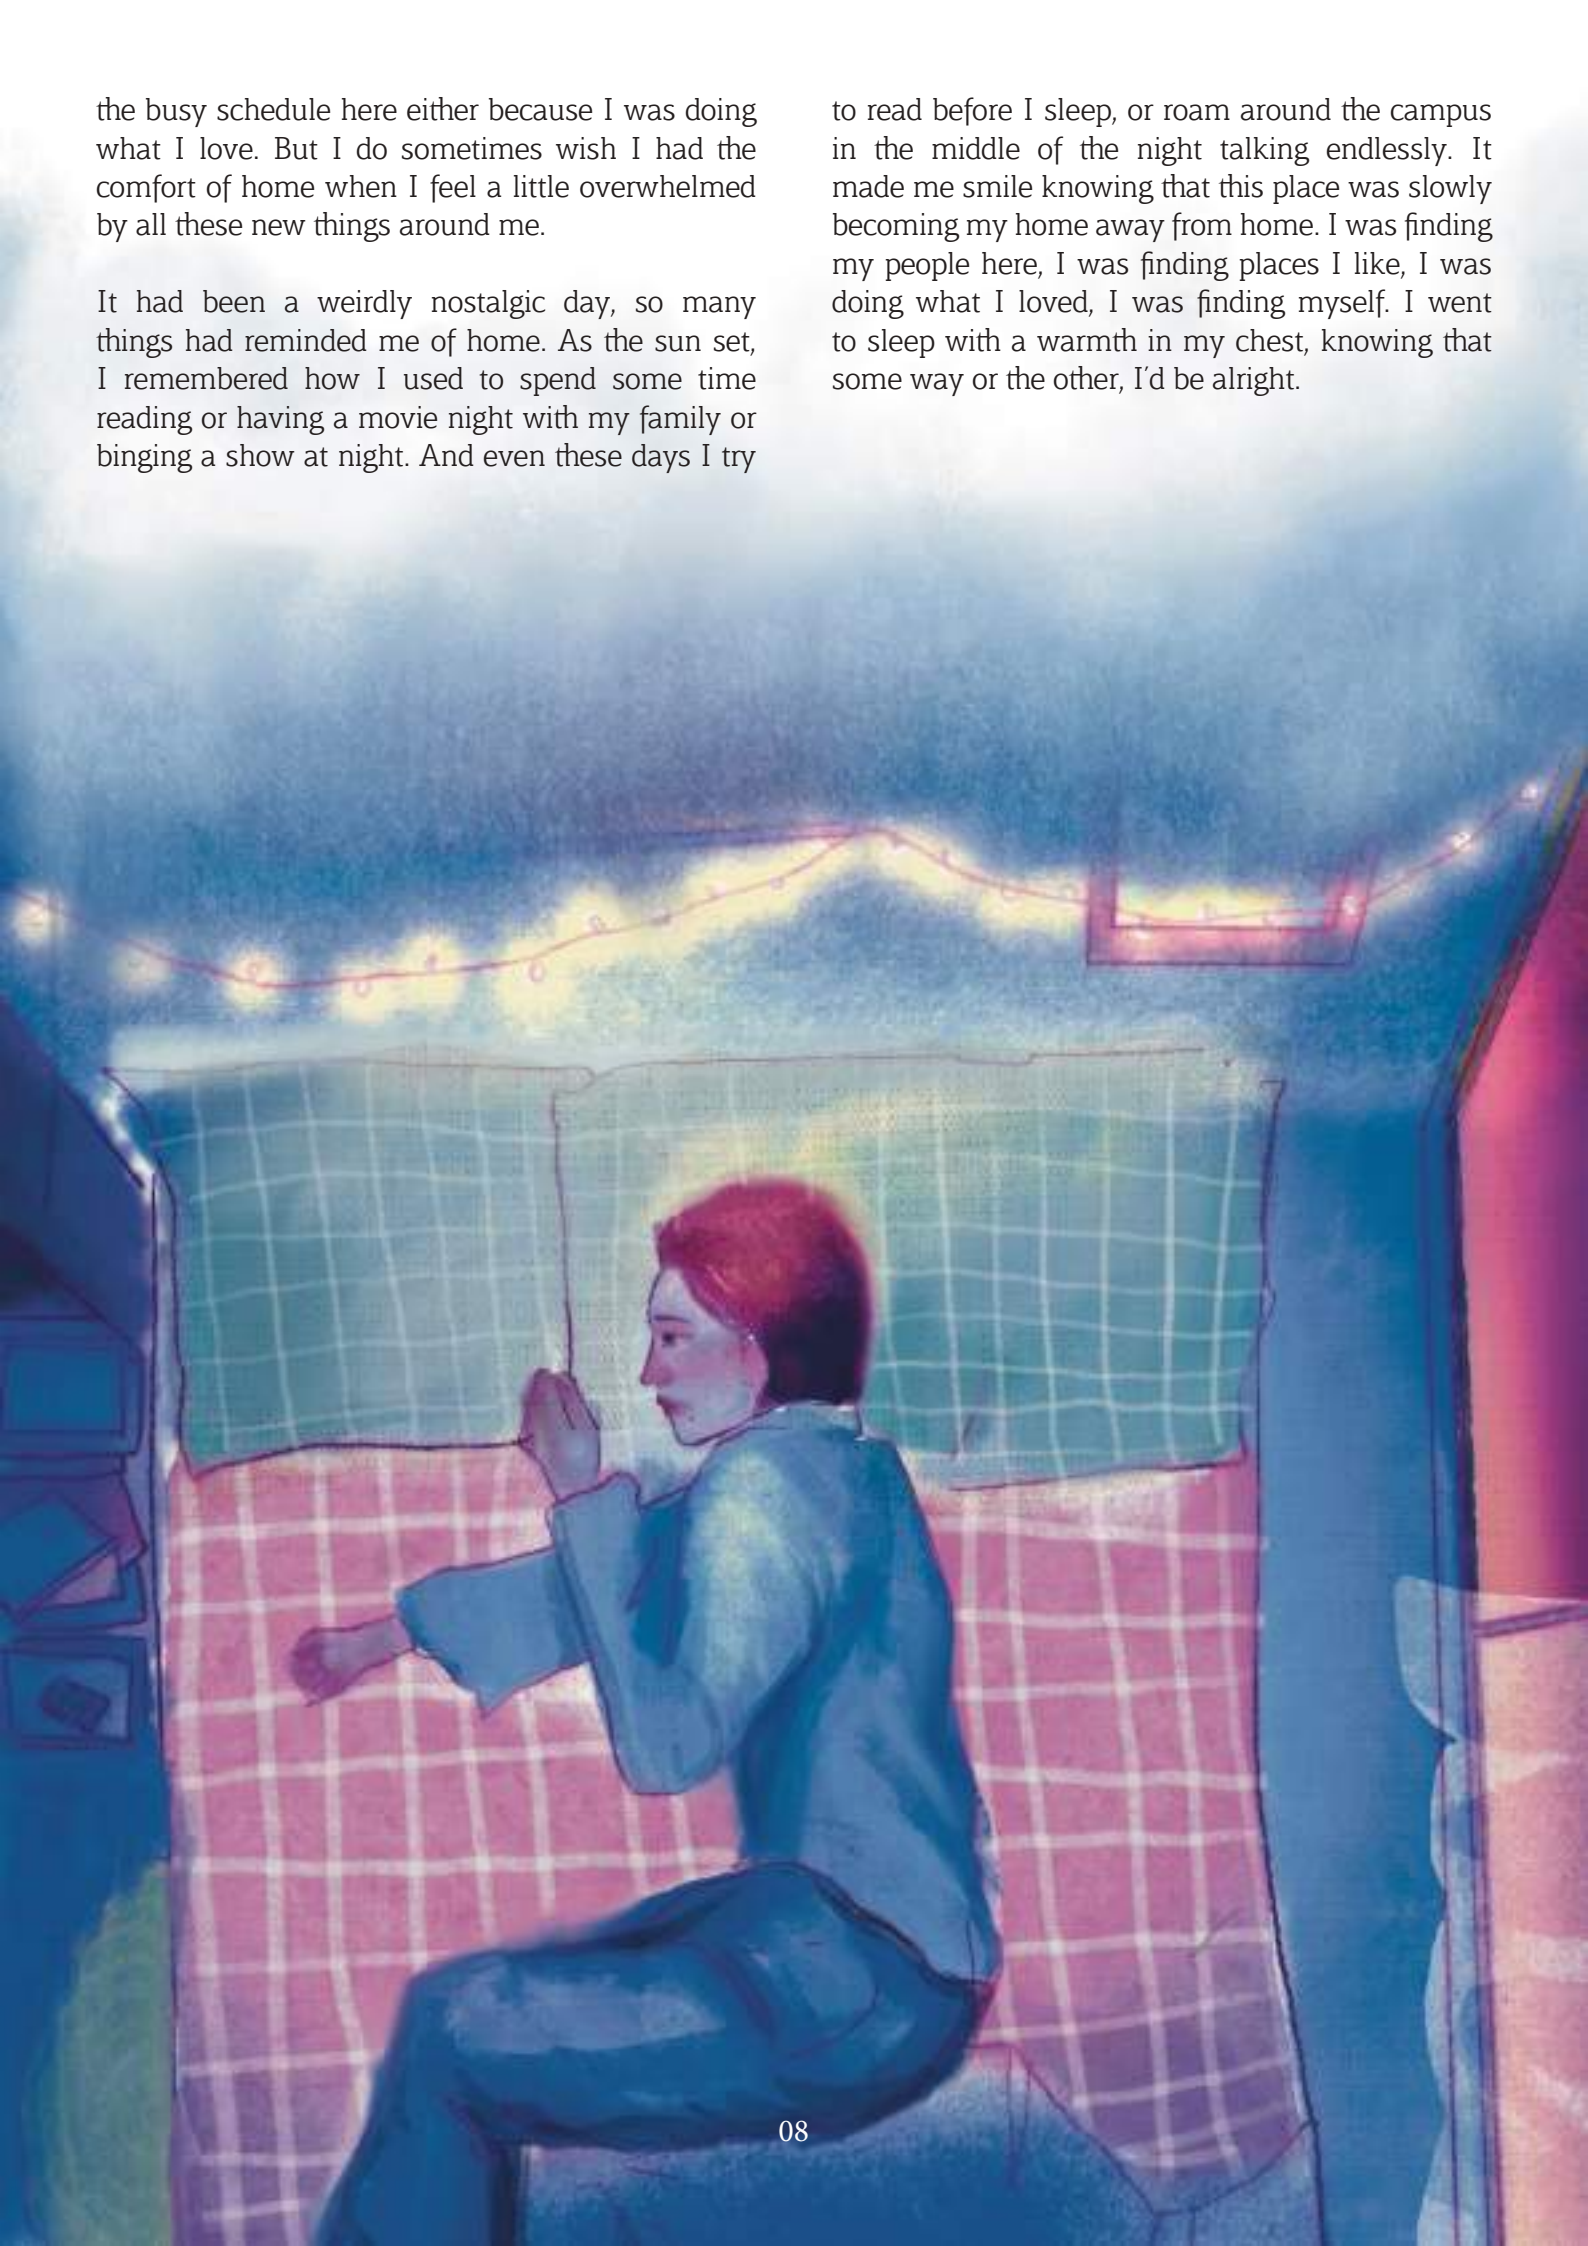

Returning to my empty hostel room gave me flashbacks to when I would return home to my little sister eager to tell me every single detail about her day with so much enthusiasm. Even when I had had a bad day and wanted to crawl away and sleep, her energy and her laughter would make it all go away. How her eyes lit up when she got to know Mum had made something she liked for lunch. She'd devour the whole plate while happily chattering away. I miss getting back into my bed and taking a nap after school. Waking up to make myself a cup of tea and sitting down to homework. I didn't mind the busy schedule here either because I was doing what I love. But I do sometimes wish I had the comfort of home when I feel a little overwhelmed by all these new things around me.

It had been a weirdly nostalgic day, so many things had reminded me of home. As the sun set, I remembered how I used to spend some time reading or having a movie night with my family or binging a show at night. And even these days I try to read before I sleep, or roam around the campus in the middle of the night talking endlessly. It made me smile knowing that this place was slowly becoming my home away from home. I was finding my people here, I was finding places I like, I was doing what I loved, I was finding myself. I went to sleep with a warmth in my chest, knowing that some way or the other, I'd be alright.

HIDDEN HORROR

UNMASKING ANIMAL CRUELTY IN THE MAKEUP INDUSTRY

The charm of the makeup industry lies in its promise of enhancing beauty and confidence. Yet, beneath the surface of these glamorous products and radiant smiles, there exists a shadowy truth that many consumers are unaware of: The relentless and frequent suffering imposed upon innocent animals, all under the guise of pursuing beauty's enchanting allure. From cosmetics giants to boutique brands, countless products have, for years, been tested on animals, leading to immense suffering and pain. This testing can include chemicals being rubbed onto skin or eyes, forced feeding of large amounts of chemicals and even lethal doses.

The transition to cruelty free alternatives carry significance as these choices stand as pillars of ethical integrity, environmental responsibility and moral qualities, echoing the call for a sustainable and harmonious future.

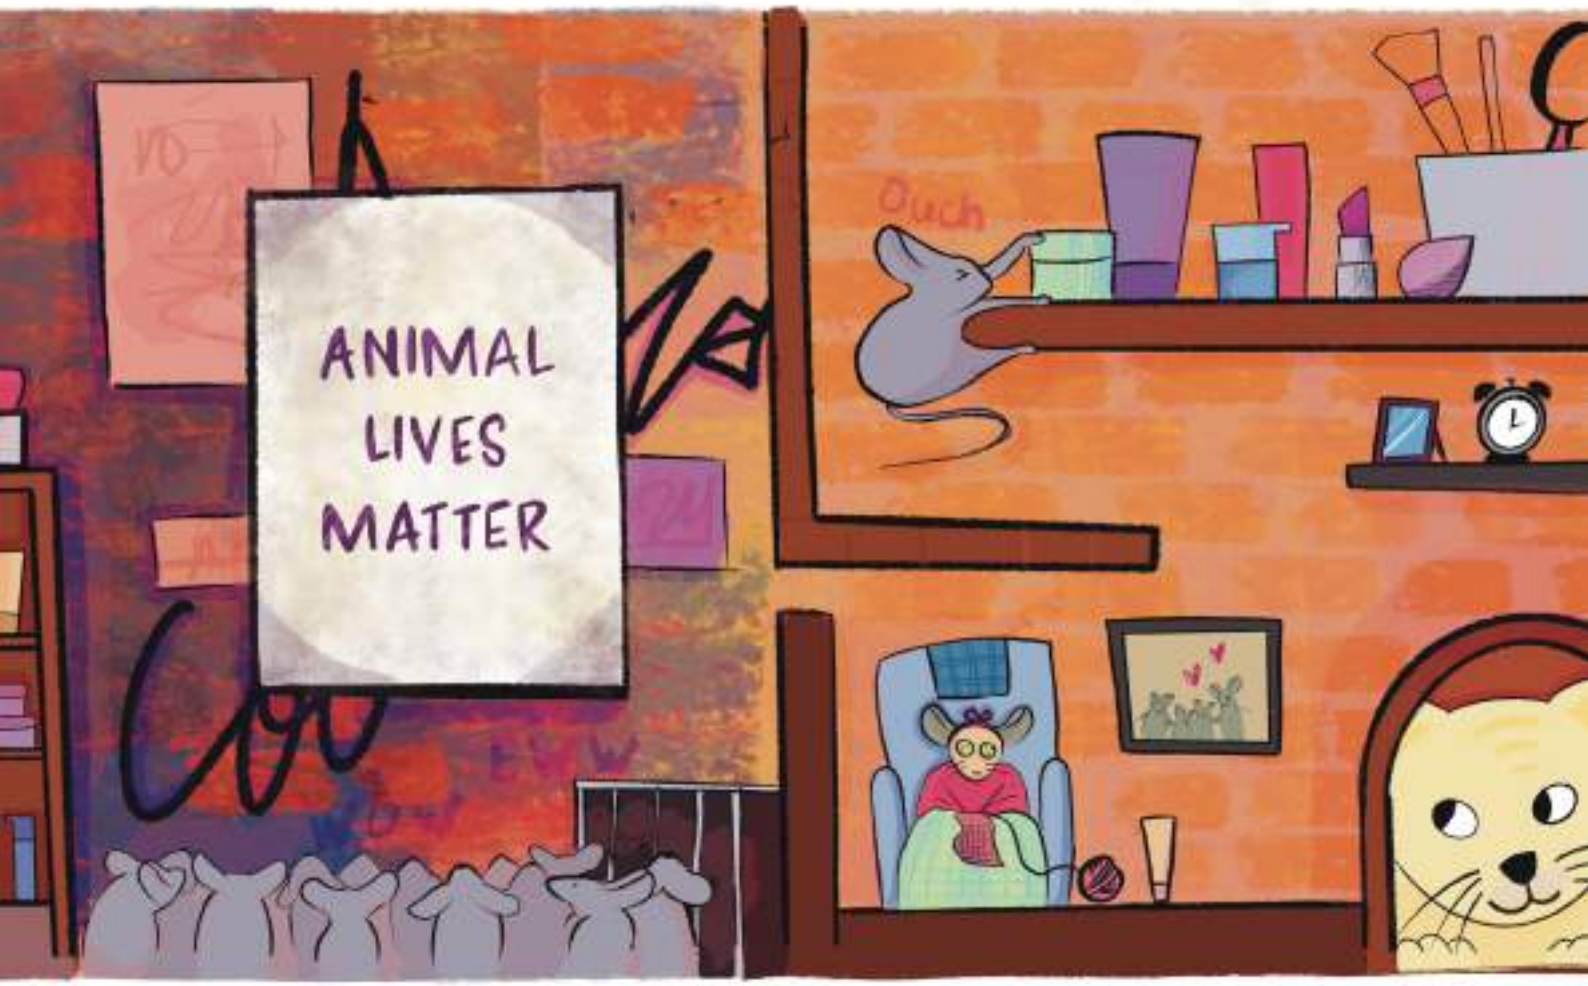

If you're a makeup enthusiast, there's good news: numerous cruelty-free makeup brands and products are available as ethical alternatives to those that test on animals.

Let's delve into some of these brand

1. Dr. Sheth's - Beauty with Integrity
Website: www.drsheths.com
Dr. Sheth's is a forerunner in the toxin-free, vegan beauty world. Their range is crafted with natural ingredients, backed by scientific research, and remarkably affordable. These products are easily accessible through popular beauty apps like Nykaa.

2. Plum Goodness - Purely Vegan Beauty
Website: www.plumgoodness.com
Plum Goodness proudly stands as India's first 100% vegan brand. They offer a wide range of body care, skincare, and exclusive makeup products at extremely affordable prices, without compromising on quality.

3. Ruby's Organics - Makeup Made Better
Website: rubysorganics.in Ruby's Organics, an Indian makeup brand, believes in "Makeup Made Better." Their products are paraben, chemical, and alcohol-free, making them a purely vegan brand serving high-quality makeup enthusiasts.

4. Kama Ayurveda - Beauty Rooted in Ayurveda
Website: www.kamaayurveda.in
Kama Ayurveda is renowned for its legitimate Ayurvedic beauty products. They provide cruelty-free, pure, natural, and safe beauty treatments with zero artificial additives, prioritizing ethical practices.

5. E.L.F. Cosmetics - Affordable and Animal-Friendly Website: www.elfcosmetics.com
E.L.F. Cosmetics is a 100% vegan and cruelty-free brand available in India through platforms like Nykaa Beauty. Known for its affordable makeup range, E.L.F. makes acquiring animal-friendly makeup a breeze.

It's time to face the ethical implications of our beauty choices and strive for a more compassionate and sustainable future. By supporting these cruelty-free makeup brands, you're not only enhancing your beauty but also making a positive impact on the world. So let's unmask the hidden horrors and embrace animal-friendly beauty as a beacon of hope for a brighter, more ethical future.

Written by Shruti Kundani
Designed by Vedika Kabra

This edition is late.
Why? Because one of our EBs got hit by a bus.

20 non messy places to eat from

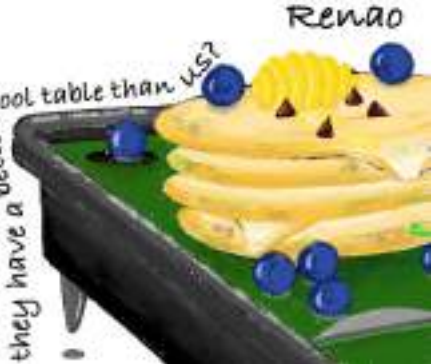

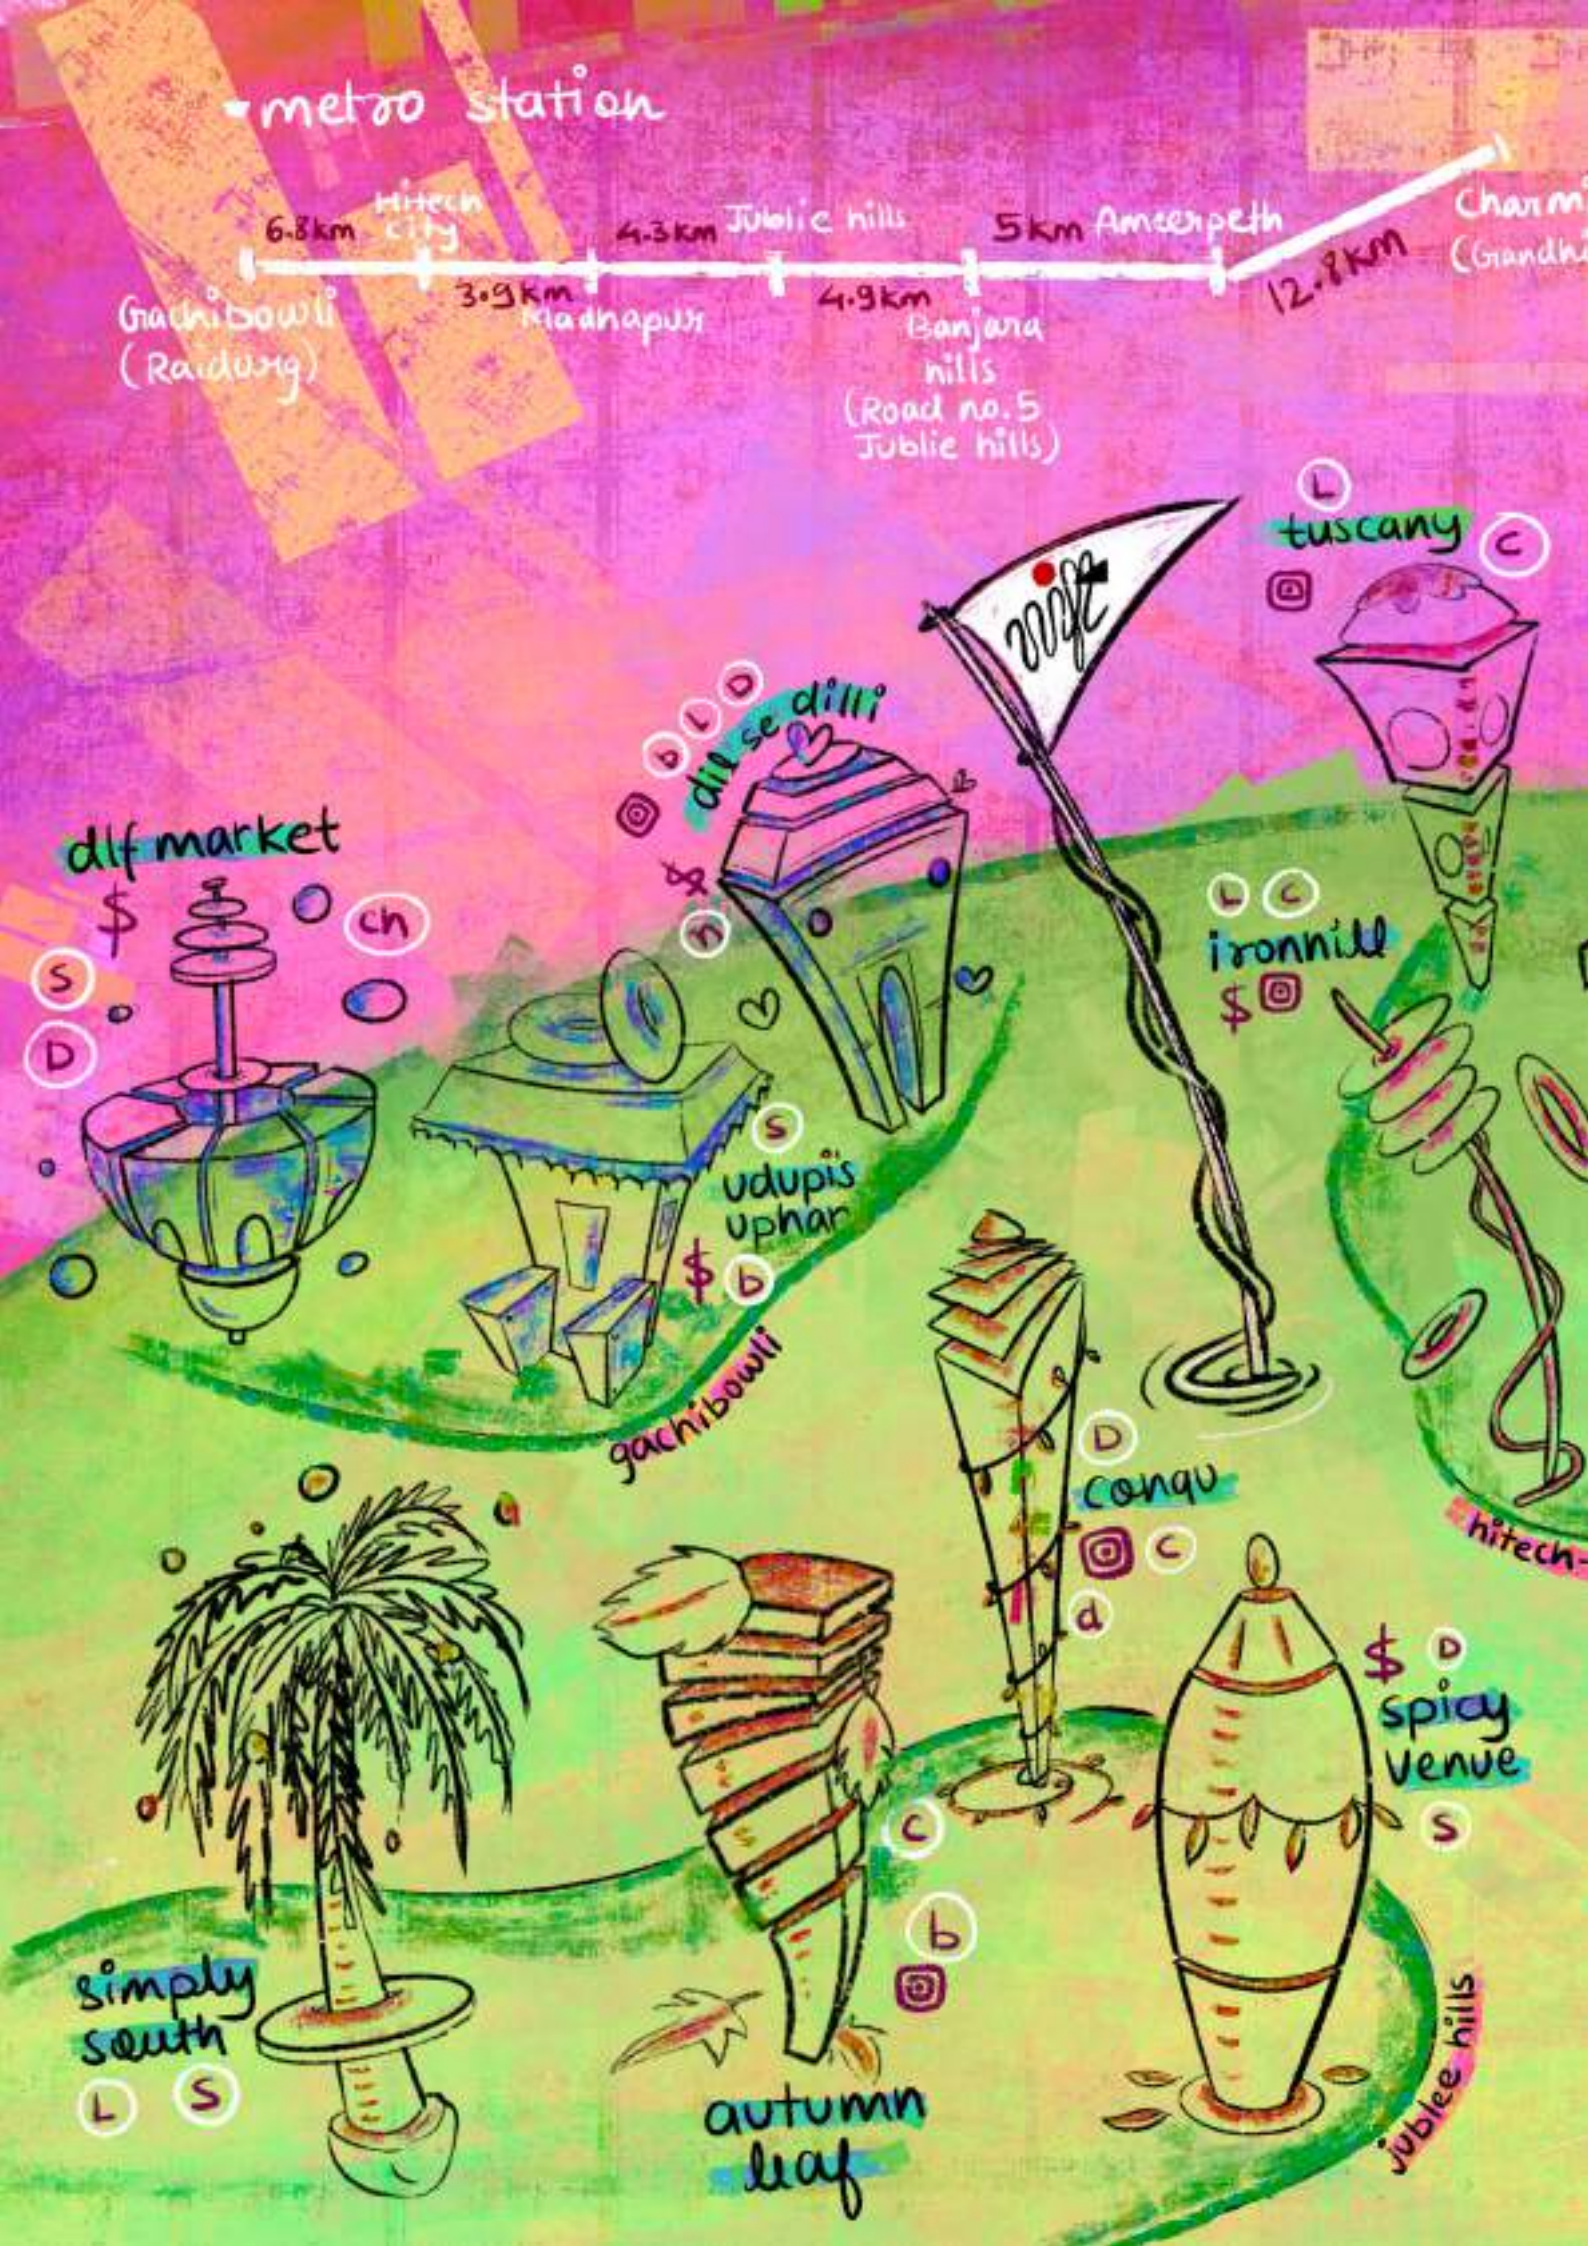

Designer - Utkarsha Gaidhane
Writer - Khushi Gulati

metro station
6.8km
Hitech city
3.9km
Madhapur
4.3km
Jublie hills
4.9km
Banjara hills
(Road no.5 Jublie hills)
5km
Ameerpeth
12.8km
Charmi
(Grandhi
Gachibowli
(Raidurg)
dlf market
dil se dilli udupis uphar
gachibowli
tuscany ironnill congu
spicy venue hitechsimply south
autumn leaf jublee hills

affordability $ instagrammable
time to visit:
breakfast (b)
lunch (L)
dinner (D)
anytime (✓)

types of wisine asian (a) continental (c)
chinese (ch)
hyderabadi (h)
desert (d)
south indian (s)
north indian (n)

inar Bhavan)

(D) (n) (ch)
president dhaba $

(c) (D) (d) bakelore $

santosh dhaba
(n) $
(L)

$ (s) (b)
laxmi gari vantillu

(h) nayaab
(L) $

(D)
(c) renao

(b) last house
(c) madhapur

city

seven sister
$
(L) (a)

haiku
(a)
(b) (L) (D)
banjara hills

(b) (L) (D)
shadaab
(h) $ charminar

$ (b) (h)
niloufer

BINGO

Burnt something in your room.	All nighter movie marathon.	Set up a stall in college	Visited 3 monuments in Hyderabad
Have an oregano, ketchup, chilli flakes stash	Went to a NIFT afterparty	Stuck picture on your hostel wall	Walked for a fashion show
Finished eating a Mandi		Worked at Ikea for a college project.
Tried Irani chai	Catch the first metro, catch the last metro		Cooked something in your room

We've all made some amazing memories in and around campus. From 3 A.M. horror movie nights to dancing your shoes off at a college event, college is a time like no other to make memories. How many things in the list can you say you've experienced? Bragging rights if you've done over 10!

Written by Dhriti Verma & Designed by Vedika Kabra

SIGMUND

UNDRESSES ME

Written by
Niharika Soni

Designed by
Bhoomi Agarwal

Sometimes I have weird dreams. The kind that will have you up on the bed thinking "what in the alien's wardrobe on Mars was that?" When I was 12, I had one such dream. I was on a cruise deck wearing whatever the 12-year-old me thought was cute. People, including my crush and a bunch of other people from my class were dancing in the background to music. Then somehow my teeth started falling out. Yeah, that happened.

After waking up and checking if my teeth were still intact, I googled what my dream meant. Apparently losing your teeth in a dream indicates insecurity about your looks.That was a phase when I felt that I was just a pretty face. Maybe I was scared of losing that. So the dream made sense. For the first time, I realised how our unconscious knows more about us than ourselves.

The unconscious mind, our dreams, and fashion could be more intimate with each other than we think. If we were to draw parallels between them, perhaps our personal style could serve as a translator of our dreams- the unconscious mind's way of showing us fears and idiosyncrasies that the conscious mind might deem irrational. Dreams are a collection of instinctual thoughts, unapologetic; they represent your suppressed desires. They are the unfiltered fashion statement of our subconscious.

However, what is the need for dreams? Why doesn't our mind show us our buried thoughts explicitly?

We often unintentionally bury traumatic incidents or thoughts as a coping mechanism. This sea of repressed thoughts that affects our perception of the world, is what we call the unconscious mind.

Like dreams, what you wear is also a reflection of your inner self. What if we were to view fashion as a means of exploration rather than just a form of self-expression? By embracing it with spontaneity and without hesitation, we might tap into our subconscious and gain a deeper understanding of our emotions, their origins, and how they manifest.

A piece of clothing evokes emotions as it connects us to ourselves. Have a pair of bumblebee tights that you loved as a kid, or a glow-in-the-dark friendship band you found while cleaning out your cupboard ever made you nostalgic? Reminded you of a phase in your life that you wouldn't want to revisit? Ever thought of how our style of clothing changes as our experiences do? Clothing lets the "now" us meet the "then" us.

When I first got to Hyderabad, like most of you I had no friends. Whenever I wore the blue and green cotton skirt that I bought during a family trip to the Beatles ashram with my handmade blue bird earrings from Delhi haat, I felt connected to my roots.

Your body is always conscious of your mind and vice-versa. It acts differently when you're stressed out and when you're happy. The mind has the power to convert emotions into something that can be physically felt. This is called Somatic.

A somatic experience, for example, can be felt when you realise emotions evoked by a song as you dance or how each stroke feels as you paint an abstract piece, it becomes your truest feeling. When you decide to let loose and express, there is always an underlying belief that is revealed by the unconscious as it finds freedom from the bounds of the conscious mind.

When you choose what to wear, a particular day of a particular month can have you feeling a certain way and you might resonate with a specific colour... it might feel like it just "clicks".

Will it always make sense at first? No. But even as random parts/thoughts come together, you analyse them and realise soon that your outfit knows you better than you know yourself.

So, go wild, feel free to unabashedly embrace your dreams and personal style with spontaneity. Let your unconscious speak to you through your dreams and use your outfits to translate them for you. Let it provide you a cathartic release for your psyche, leaving you to figure out the "why".

Often our conscious mind is ill-adapted to reality and we evade tasks that are a significant part of our life. So, the unconscious sends messages through compensatory dreams. They occur when we lose a sense of equilibrium in life. Dreams of missing the flight home or failing jury aim to tell us to pull up our socks...funny thing I'm in Knitwear, right? nervous laughter They bring us insights and awaken our personality's dormant qualities revealing the unconscious elements of our mind.

When it gets difficult to take charge of one aspect of our life, we may compensate by asserting control over another. For some, wearing the "perfect outfit" might be the only way to gain command. Makes me wonder if noticing a pattern in our everyday outfits can help us figure out more about what our inner self feels.

Fun fact did you notice the cows on campus?
That's it period.

IN THE DEFENCE OF TODAY'S CONCERT CULTURE

Noopur Joglekar
Gouri Ammanagi

FROM THE POV OF AN UNDERPRIVILEGED GEN Z*

Your Honour, what comes to your mind when you think of 'concerts'?

Do you think of a stage where the artists are sitting down in a classical setting, the audience with their phones on silent and appreciating the music only with a couple of 'wah-wah'? Or does your imagination take you to a stadium full of screaming fans with their flashlights and cameras on, dancing to their favourite artist's song? Does it remind you of a Thursday spent listening to Qawwali or a Mata ka Jagrata during Navratri? Or do your memories smell like the teen spirits in your college fest where you had an absolute blast listening to a cute musician or maybe to a pub where you were woozy dancing to a live band singing?

For this case, let's set a scene, shall we?

Imagine you are in an arena filled with 70,000 fans wearing bracelets and screaming at the top of their voices as the artist performs her songs for 3 continuous hours. All this while changing through an abundance of costumes, doing large-scale set swaps and performing jaw-dropping stunts. Imagine that you are at Taylor Swift's Eras Tour. And since it is the highest-grossing tour of 2023, its reputation precedes the understanding of today's concert culture. These concerts, which in this context mean big arena tours that are held beyond religious or dramatic conditions, seem to have changed a lot recently.

The prosecution, states that the concert culture has deteriorated and is heading in a bad direction and it is us who are to be held responsible for the same. They talk about smartphones being used excessively to constantly record or live-stream videos in order to create content from those later.

This content is used to go up on social media, such as Instagram and TikTok, to result in an increase in likes, views and followers which might also help put money in the content creator's pocket. A lot of artists like Niall Horan and Mitski have complained about how it hinders their connection with the fans while they are performing since the concert attendees are too busy documenting the performance rather than enjoying the music.

Shooting videos with flashlights on might bother other audience members too and an increase in such cases is what compromises the concert etiquette. It also goes hand in hand with throwing things at the performers just to get their attention even if it ends up hurting them. And getting it all on camera so you could brag about having shared a personal moment with the artist is where today's fan behaviour really hits rock bottom.

The increase in the number of concert attendees after COVID, the tickets being unreasonably expensive and the fan entitlement that may be a result of the extreme difficulty caused in booking tickets are just a few more changed factors.

The defence stands here humbly saying, "We got blood on our face, big disgrace, waving our banner all over your face. We will rock you."

So, allow us to state a few facts and paint you a picture of what these concerts looked like almost 50 years ago. This was when the ticket amounts hadn't quadrupled and companies like Ticketmaster didn't have to be taken to court because getting tickets was a lot easier. The number of people attending the concerts was smaller. The only people shooting the concerts were the attendees with cameras of their own and big production companies hired to shoot the performances officially. For underprivileged people, getting a glimpse into these concerts meant either watching the live telecast or getting a copy of the concert film (if made).

As far as throwing stuff on the stage is concerned, it has always been a way for audiences to connect with the artists. The only difference was that not everyone back then had a way to capture this interaction with the artist on camera and thus the crowds were not as determined to hit the performers as they are today.

These facts are enough to prove that the claims made against our client are just a result of the natural progression of what was 50 years ago affected by the world we live in today. The tickets are expensive because the companies selling them have chosen to exploit their customers. Money, money, money, must be funny, right?

The concerts now have more attendees because people were shut in their homes for 2 years. The throwing of stuff, although sad, can just be looked at as tradition being continued in a new light. One cannot be surprised that a generation who documents their entire life and maybe even makes money off it won't record and brag about the show they spent so much money on.

Bear in mind that these are also the people who have made and listened to music digitally, so their experience of attending these performances will involve a digital device.

If anything, this content not only creates employment opportunities for people but also makes these shows accessible to everyone in the world, that too in better quality. This also leads to the free advertisement of the artists and their tours. And the algorithms on social media might just introduce them to newer audiences and fan bases.

So now the question pertains- is the concert etiquette and fan entitlement really what is dragging the concert culture downhill today? Or is this a natural development that is met with resistance by the pessimists who aren't ready to accept change? And this Your Honour, we leave it up for you to decide.

Lastly, we'd like to end with a quote by Freddie Mercury,

"We watch the shows, we watch the stars

On videos for hours and hours

We hardly need to use our ears

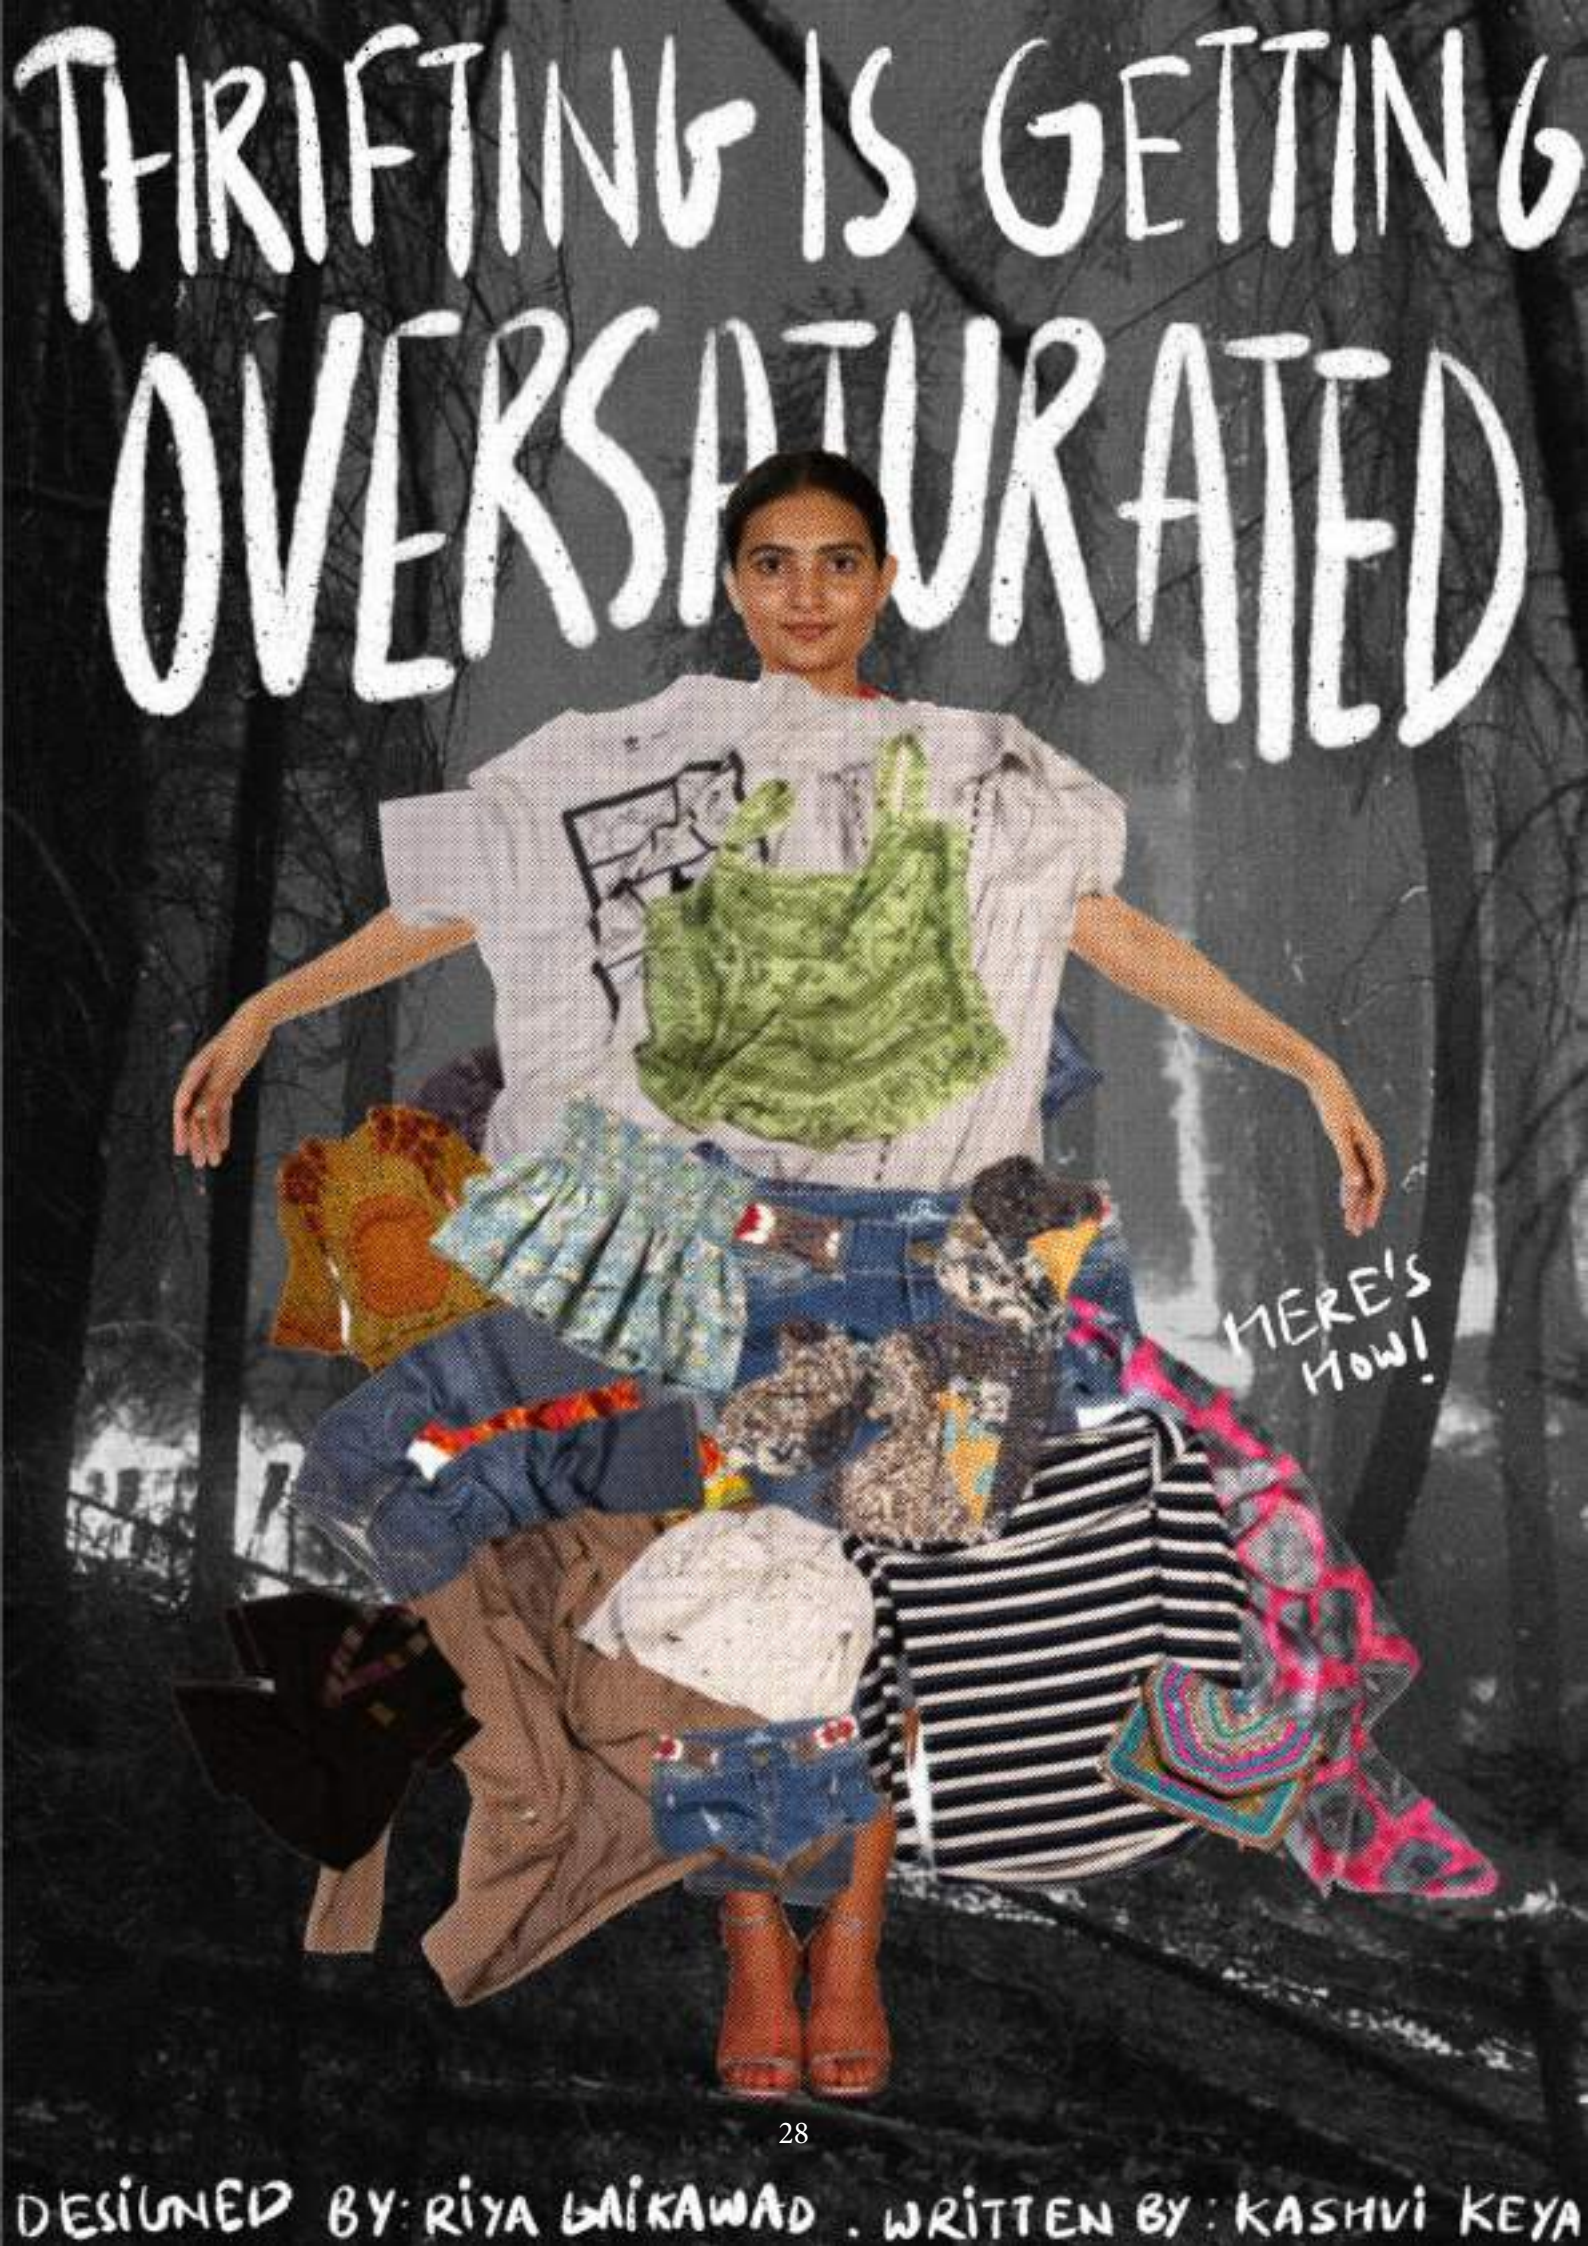

How music changes through the years

Let's hope you never leave, old friend"

This is us resting our case.

This edition is so fireee unlike the next one.
The next one is gonna be bomb.

DESIGNED BY: RIYA GAIKAWAD . WRITTEN BY : KASHVI KEYA

Deep in your phone's screen, sitting on the couch you're scrolling through TikTok, or Instagram reels when you see someone wear a unique piece of clothing. Visualising how trendy you would look, you rush to buy it. However, in the time you spend waiting for it to get delivered to your door, you have seen the item worn by multiple people, on 4 different social media sites, people re-selling it for triple its worth so you put it in the back of your closet and forget about it.

This is how micro-trends are born.

They are fashion fads that gain a high amount of attention and lose relevance just as quickly. The rise and acceleration are primarily caused by social media sites, one piece gets commodified in a mainstream, marketable way. For example, cut-out pants and eye makeup from the HBO series Euphoria, strawberry dress, corsets from Amazon, a surge of pink clothing because of the Barbie movie, etc.

To gain their sense of style and personality people have usually thrifted. It has been a thing for years now, but it gained widespread popularity post-lockdown, especially in India. Thrifting provides customers with a balance of sustainable choice and versatility. However lately, micro trends have been bleeding their way through fast fashion inside thrift stores.

These micro-trends perpetuate the idea that contentment and validation can be achieved through constant acquisition and lead to people buying and curating their outfits to please the audience. People now look for them in thrift stores since it's the most acceptable and answerable way of indulging in micro trends.

"In this small business, it's very important to know what's trending so even micro trends and following subcultures of what's in demand is what sells. I am always scrolling on the internet to see what the biggest audience is for fashion and accessories. It helps make the sales go higher." responded a thrift store owner upon asking their opinions on overpowering fads in thrift stores.

"Everything that is in trend sells, no matter how overpriced it might seem to thrift."

"Our prices are usually reasonable, 300-600 and sometimes 1000-1500 for a few vintage pieces but the increasing popularity and rise of trends has led to limited selection and increased competition making a lot of pieces unaffordable. E.g.- 800 for a printed oversized t-shirt."

Even with the skyrocketing prices, and limited choices lately, the majority of buyers when asked why they thrift replied that it's an easy and cheap way to fill their wardrobes up with what's "in" every few weeks. The owners also added that some of the best-selling products in their store are trendy fashion pieces.

While it might be a conscious doing, sellers and buyers both agree that they have gotten stuck in a labyrinth of financial burdens, a need for external validation, and an inescapable urge to replace fashion items every few weeks.

Microtrends and over-saturation of thrifting are interconnected phenomena where the whole purpose of thrifting is constantly defeated by overpricing, mass production by ultra-fast fashion brands, and the internet supporting overconsumption.

If our inherent desires, relationship with trends, social media influence, and conforming to "aesthetics" are not reflected upon, over-saturation of thrifting may take over. This could lead to the loss of one of the major versatile, sustainable ways of keeping fashion accessible and affordable.

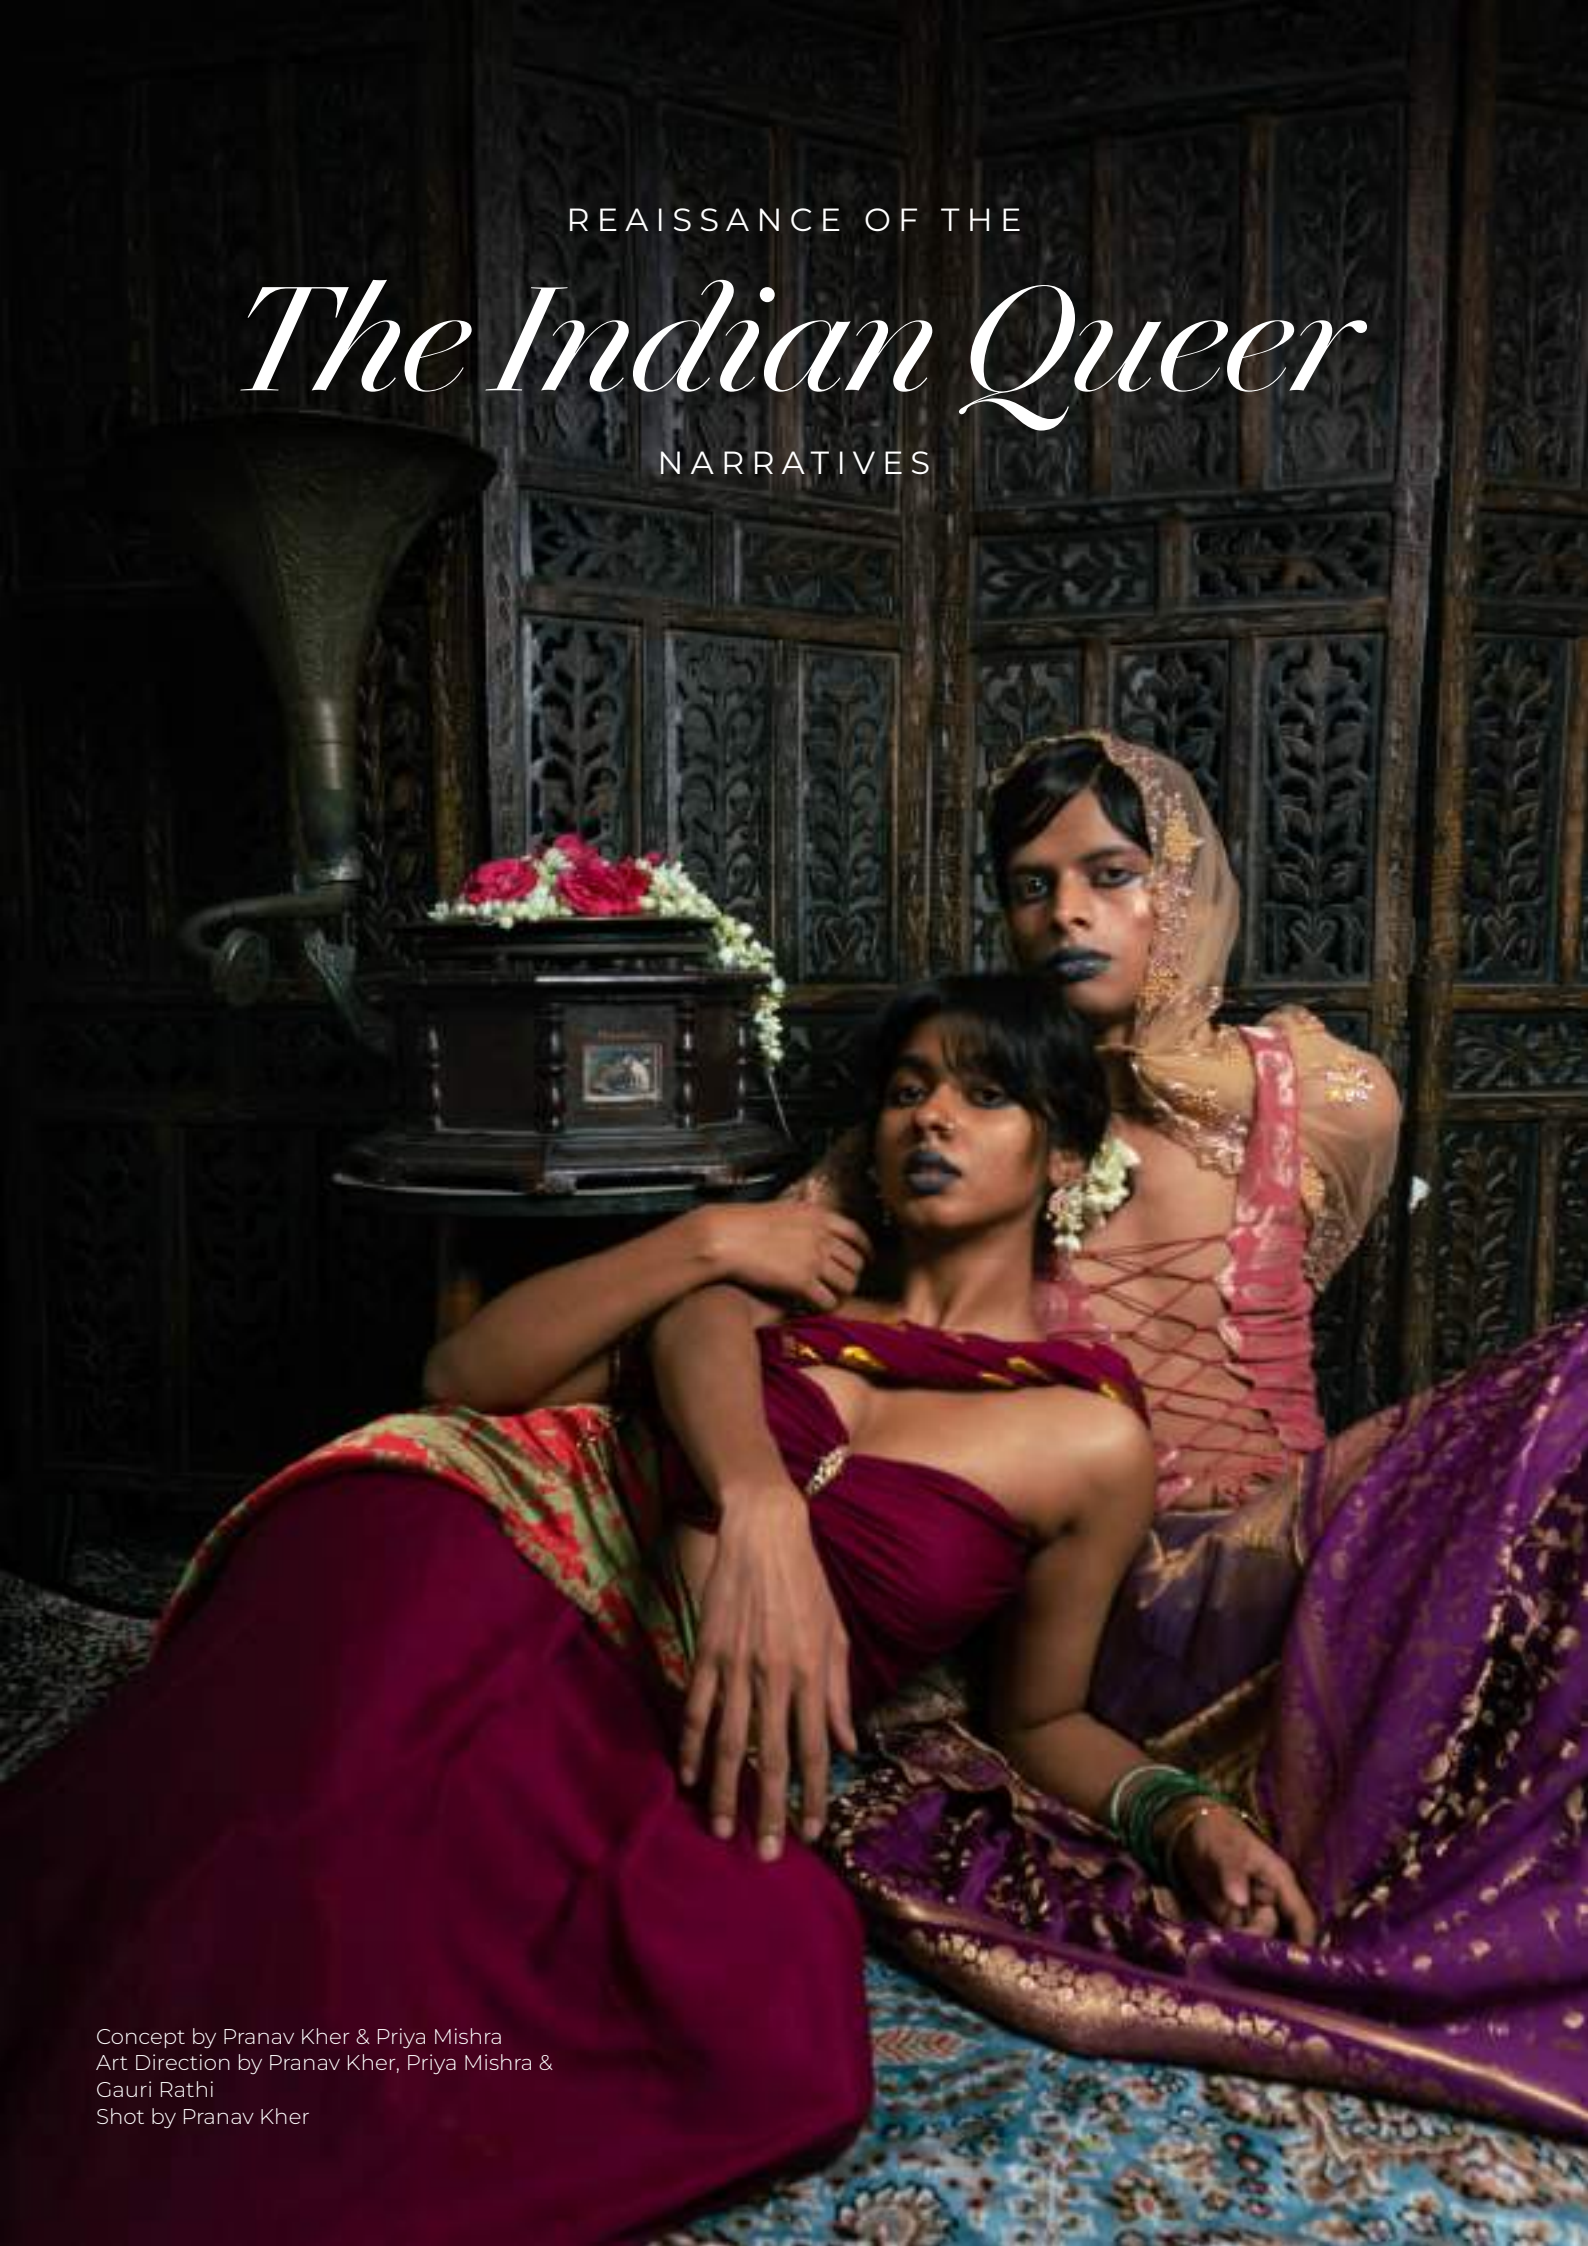

Let's escape from the magazine.
Byee

REAISSANCE OF THE

The Indian Queer

NARRATIVES

Concept by Pranav Kher & Priya Mishra
Art Direction by Pranav Kher, Priya Mishra &
Gauri Rathi
Shot by Pranav Kher

Throughout history, the narratives of queer individuals have been systematically overlooked, leaving a profound absence of their stories within the annals of art and history. Denied the representation afforded to others, stigma and taboo have silenced and concealed these identities, robbing them of their rightful place in the cultural tapestry of India.

This transformative photoshoot is a deliberate endeavour to illuminate the hidden chapters of Indian history, spotlighting the voices and experiences of the queer community deliberately marginalized and omitted from traditional representations. Set against the backdrop of vintage Indian aesthetics, this project represents an artistic journey seeking to reclaim lost narratives, ushering back the obscured presence of queer individuals into the realm of artistic documentation.

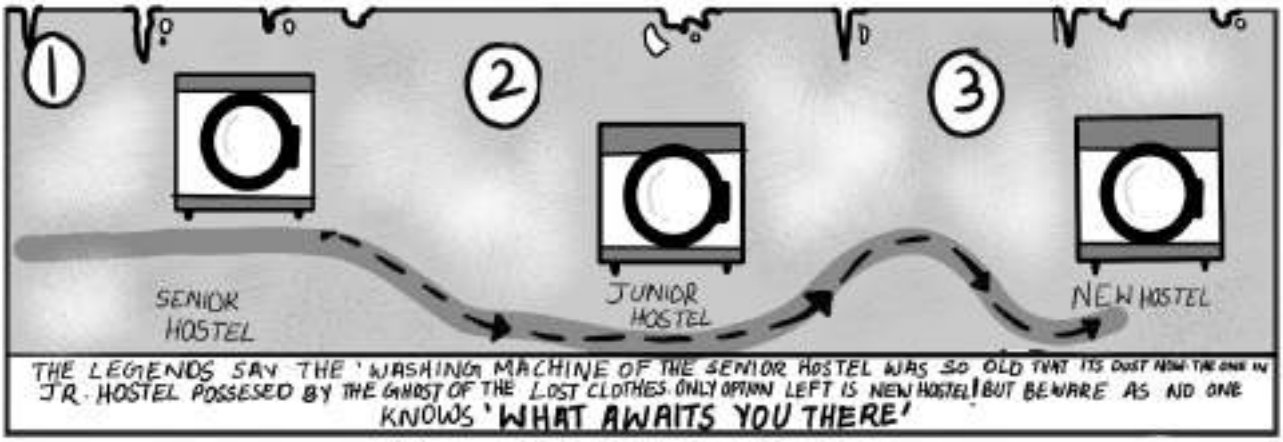

Written by Saumya Gupta & Designed by Arjun

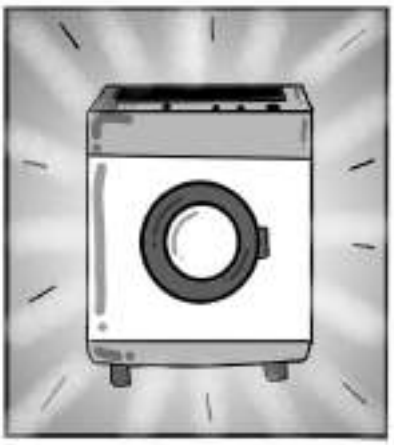

Creeeak
GUESS IT'S TIME FOR 'LAUNDRY'!!
LET'S DO IT!
AAAAA
SHUT UP WOMAN WILL YOU?
'WAS I JUST GET TOLDOFF BY A SOCK'
DARE YOU CALL ME A MERE SOCK ?! YOU MORTAL!! I'M THE SOCK GHOST! EWE-Y..... I HAVE HAUNTED ..... BY THE WAY NEED HELP IN THOSE?
CAN YOU HELP PLEASE?
SAY NO MORE KIDDO!
SNAP
WHOOSH

So this was the story of how Eewy, the lone sock ghost became

'EEWY THE SOCK GENIE'

FASHION MUSEUMS AROUND THE WORLD

a tour of couture history

Written by Yashita
Designed by Abel Matthew

Hey, fellow fashion aficionados! Let's delve into the world of fashion history, museums rise above being mere archives; they are cherished gatekeepers of couture's rich heritage. Beyond their tangible structures, these institutions hold the very essence of our collective sartorial history. In our comprehensive voyage through 'Fashion Museums Around the World: An Exploration of Couture History', we set forth on a discerning global tour to uncover the profound importance of these venerable establishments. Our journey elegantly traverses through time, intricately weaving the artistry of fashion into the very fabric of our culture.

The Birth of Fashion Museums

Our journey starts by revisiting the humble origins of fashion museums, initially connected to design schools and textile exhibits. Their primary goal was to educate both students and the public about the intricacies of fashion. These early showcases prioritised historical and cultural influences over aesthetics.

A pivotal moment in fashion's museum journey occurred in 1903 at the Victoria and Albert Museum in London when historical costumes were displayed, marking a turning point in fashion's recognition as a legitimate subject for museum exhibitions.

The Trailblazers of Fashion Preservation

As we delve deeper into this fascinating realm, let us pay homage to the pioneers of fashion preservation. These are the visionaries who recognised the artistry and historical significance of clothing and accessories, elevating them to the status of cultural artefacts. Their unwavering efforts have left an indelible mark on the landscape of fashion museums.

Diana Vreeland, the former iconic editor-in-chief of Vogue and curator of the Costume Institute at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, played a pivotal role in raising fashion to a pedestal of cultural significance. Her visionary exhibitions at the Met, such as "The World of Balenciaga" and "The Glory of Russian Costume," ushered in a new era of appreciation for fashion as an art form.

Aileen Ribeiro, a distinguished fashion historian, took upon herself the noble task of bridging the gap between fashion and academia. Her expertise, coupled with her curatorial work at institutions like the Victoria and Albert Museum, has deepened our understanding of historical clothing.
Cristóbal Balenciaga, the legendary fashion designer, left an indelible mark on the industry. His unwavering emphasis on craftsmanship and innovation continues to echo in the world of fashion. Collaborations with museums serve to underscore his commitment to showcasing the artistry behind clothing.

Yves Saint Laurent, through his foundation, ensures that his legacy lives on. His extensive collection of couture garments remains accessible to the public and aspiring designers, connecting past and present in a seamless fashion.

Why the Safeguarding of Fashion Matters

Fashion is more than just a reflection of personal style; it's a vital cultural artefact that encapsulates the essence of its time. Here's why every fashion student should be passionate about safeguarding this heritage:

- Fashion embodies the rich heritage of societies worldwide, with traditional attire and contemporary designs bearing cultural narratives that deserve preservation.
- It serves as a valuable historical record, offering insights into evolving tastes, technological progress, and social movements.
- Fashion is an ever-evolving art form, akin to painting or sculpture, and understanding its history is crucial for the aspiring fashion designer. Museums play a pivotal role in preserving this dynamic evolution, offering a wealth of knowledge to shape your own creative journey

A Global Tapestry of Fashion History

Our global voyage takes us to renowned fashion museums, each housing a treasure trove of fashion history and cultural heritage. These institutions offer unique insights into the traditions, creativity, and styles of the regions they represent.

National Museum, New Delhi: A Tapestry of Indian Textiles

Apart from these, in India, the National Museum in New Delhi, which is celebrated for its rich collection of Indian textiles and attire, including the resplendent sarees and traditional clothing from various regions.

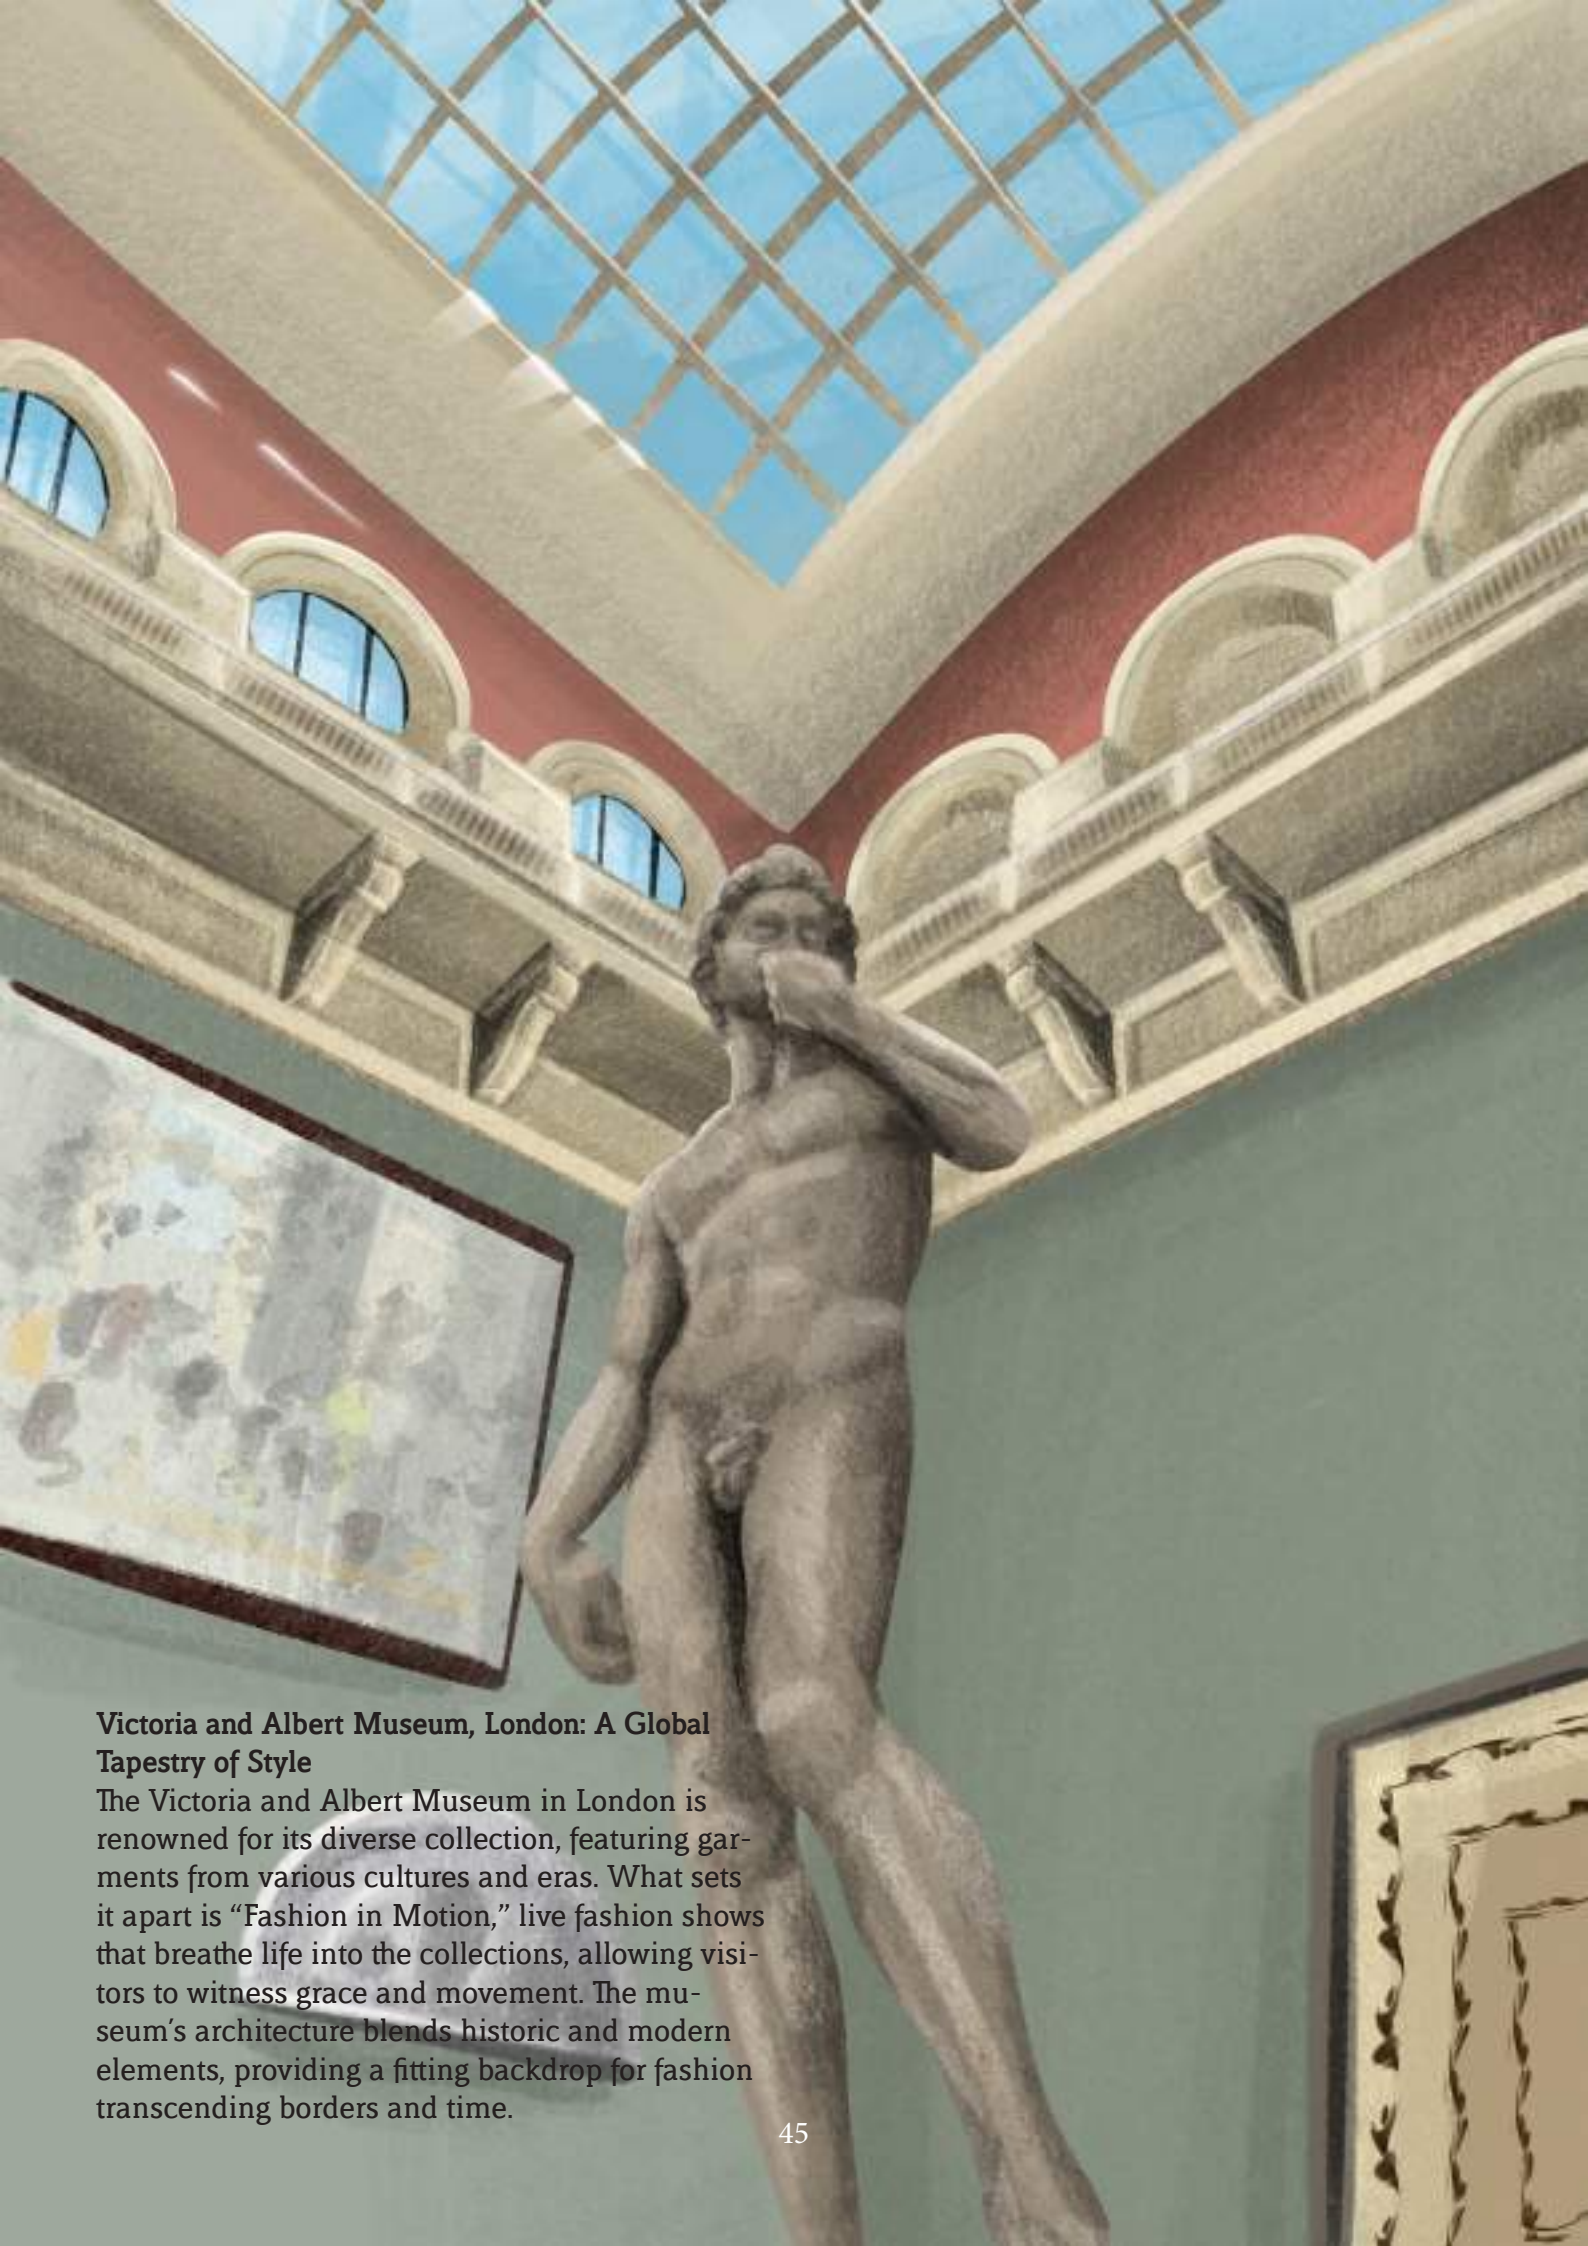

The Met's Costume Institute, New York: Where Fashion Meets Art

The Met's Costume Institute in New York is a fashion sanctuary. It's famous for hosting the annual Met Gala and houses an extensive collection spanning centuries. What sets it apart is its skilful blend of fashion and art. Each exhibition is meticulously curated, weaving garments into a broader artistic context. The institute's architecture complements this, creating an elegant backdrop for its masterpieces. It's a celebration of fashion as an art form and a reflection of society's evolution.

Musée de la Mode et du Textile, Paris: The Heart of Haute Couture

Nestled in the heart of the fashion capital, the Musée de la Mode et du Textile in Paris is where fashion aficionados find their Mecca. Its collection showcases French fashion, celebrating the nation's legacy of haute couture and ready-to-wear. The museum preserves the elegance and innovation that define French fashion. Its architecture exudes timeless beauty, a perfect setting to honour Parisian fashion excellence.

Victoria and Albert Museum, London: A Global Tapestry of Style

The Victoria and Albert Museum in London is renowned for its diverse collection, featuring garments from various cultures and eras. What sets it apart is "Fashion in Motion," live fashion shows that breathe life into the collections, allowing visitors to witness grace and movement. The museum's architecture blends historic and modern elements, providing a fitting backdrop for fashion transcending borders and time.

Costume Institute, Kyoto: Bridging the Past and Present

Hidden away in Kyoto, the Costume Institute is a treasure trove of traditional Japanese clothing, including kimonos and obis. This institution bridges the past and present, preserving the craftsmanship of traditional attire and emphasising its influence on contemporary fashion. Its architecture seamlessly fuses old and new, creating a serene atmosphere where time seems to stand still.

EVENTS:
A LOOKBACK

BY SAUMYA AND DHRITI

GI CONFERENCE

NIFT Hyderabad conducted a diagnostic study of 10 Geographical Indication (GI) registered products of Telangana and Andhra Pradesh to understand the ground situation, study the challenges faced by the producers and explore options for improving authorised users enlisted for GI. This led to the GI Day event, held in Novotel on the 6th of October. Inaugural proceedings included introducing NIFT, a welcome address by the director, and a classical Indian dance.

Post this, the panels began. There were 3 panels discussing 3 different tracks; 1. Geographical Heritage-Issues and relevance, 2. Strategic mediations for sustenance & progression of skills within the identified geo-location, and 3. Market Intelligence and Scope for Branding and Communication. Esteemed guests for the event included Susan Thomas.

HANDLOOM DAY

The craftsmanship of weavers was honoured by NIFT Hyderabad on August 7, National Handloom Day. The Textile Design students constructed the gallery wall in the Textile Design hallway, the draped Matkas, and the handloom sarees on mannequins. Cultural performances honouring Indian culture kicked off the occasion. The 'Styling with Handlooms' competition honoured the classic elegance of handlooms by requiring entrants to style a model using 60% handlooms while drawing inspiration from a fashion look or theme. A topical panel discussion marked the end of the day. The campus community's understanding of the creativity and sustainability of handloom weaving was enhanced by the event, which also showcased workmanship.

FRESHER'S DAY

Freshers, organised by the third-years, took place in the captivating world of cirque glam. Each contestant made a grand entrance, adorned in vibrant costumes resembling clowns and jugglers, embellished with glitter, feathers, and elegant top hats. The evening was filled with thrilling performances and Anjana emerged as the charismatic ringmaster of this circus and was crowned "Fresher of the Year 2023."

CULTURAL EXTRAVAGANZA

Department of Language and Culture, Government of Telangana presented 3 captivating performances at the auditorium. An Enchanting Fusion of Elegance and Tradition, the 3 dances showcased were a convergence of worlds and a celebration of heritage. Oggu and Perni folk dancers were vibrant and spirited and showcased the rich heritage of our land. The graceful pirouettes of a New York ballerina entranced the crowd.

INDEPENDENCE DAY

At 7:30 a.m., the 77th Independence Day got underway in the centre circle. Students embraced the chance to honour the essence of the country through Indian fashion and weavings, decked out in traditional attire and handlooms. Every person present saluted as the Director raised the national flag. With riveting drama, soul-stirring music, and fascinating dances, the college came together to celebrate the symphony of freedom.

ULLASAM

The Ullasam pro-show, an evening full of food, crochet, saree, and game stalls, was successful in getting the students excited about Onam. The college campus was transformed into a vibrant tapestry of colours during the Onam celebration, and the smell of delectable Onam Sadhya filled the air, bringing the college community together making everyone joyous.

TEACHER'S DAY

The college emanated gratitude on Teachers' Day as students conveyed their appreciation through imaginative presentations. Adopting a distinctive Hogwarts theme, teachers were presented with invitations resembling Hogwarts letters, each adorned with a specific house colour, and were encouraged to attire themselves accordingly. This event's joyous ambience served as a tribute to the immeasurable contributions of educators, fostering stronger bonds between students and teachers in their shared pursuit of knowledge.

JANMASTHMI

Our college campus was transformed into a vibrant space adorned with colourful decorations, emanating a joyous ambience. We engaged in crafting diyas for ourselves through a pottery workshop and performed the 'aarti' together filling us with a sense of unity and spirituality. A matki phod competition added a mischievous element to the festivities.

With traditional music and dance dramas depicting snippets from the life of Lord Krishna, this event left an indelible mark on our hearts, encapsulating the essence of Janmashtami.

HINDI DIWAS

We commemorated Hindi, our official language, in an unofficial yet heartwarming manner, while the rain poured outside. The evening was adorned with captivating narratives, heartfelt poems, and soul-stirring shayaris, all centred around the theme, क्या फलि्में समाज का आइना है?

GANESH MAHOTSAV

On September 19th, as we adorned ourselves in vibrant kesariya safa, the students of NIFT Hyderabad enthusiastically welcomed Lord Ganesha to our campus. The joyous chants of "Ganpati Bappa Morya" resounded in the air. Commencing with the first aarti, the festivities unfolded with delectable food, thrift stalls, and captivating competitions orchestrated by the Knitwear department.

Roopkatha, a styling competition inspired by Bappa, and Sculpting Divinities, an ultimate idol-making competition, provided students with an opportunity to create their own environmentally-friendly Ganesha. As the day progressed, a traditional Maharashtrian dance called lavani added a splendid touch, bringing the celebrations to a delightful close.

In the blink of an eye, seven days had flown by, and it was time to bid farewell to our beloved Bappa. The eco-friendly visarjan witnessed the same fervour and energy that had permeated throughout the campus.

BATHUKAMMA

With the arrival of Navratri, the enchanting period of Bathukamma unfolds - a distinctive Telugu festival that embodies the essence of flowers and prosperity. Adorned in traditional attire, students donned langa vonilu and panchalu, joining hands to construct and dance around the customary flower stack. The melodious rhythms of folk music resonated, capturing the essence of Telangana's cultural opulence and nurturing an atmosphere of shared elation.

The pinnacle of the event was the tantalising vindhu bhojanam, an appetising feast that was generously provided free of charge to all NIFT Hyderabad students. Keeping in sync with the festive fervour, the day concluded with a riveting game of kabaddi, epitomising skill, and strategic prowess.

ALUMNI MEET

"Threads of Time," the aptly titled alumni meet at NIFT Hyderabad, brought together former students in a joyous celebration of cherished memories and profound conversations that stretched into the late hours. Lively anecdotes and personal narratives flowed among old friends, each sharing the unique paths they had traversed since their time on campus.

What was once a setting for lectures and exams transformed into a tapestry of reminiscence and introspection. This occasion served as a poignant reminder that, despite the diverging paths we may follow, the bonds forged within these revered walls endure.

MAHALAY (GARBA NIGHT)

Dressed in exquisite chaniya cholis, NIFT Hyderabad was once again poised for an exuberant evening of celebration. The event commenced with a spirited garba performance, followed by an emotionally stirring and intellectually stimulating dance drama inspired by a profound theme. However, the festivities didn't stop there.

The NIFTians engaged in entertaining games designed to test their tolerance for spicy flavours, as well as a captivating styling competition inspired by the rich mythology associated with the festival of Dussehra. Ultimately, the talented individuals of NIFT concluded the night in true NIFT style, with a lively DJ Night.

MEET THE TEAM

THE DESIGN TEAM

GAURI RATHI

ASHISH SINHA

SAMHITA CHILUKURI

LAVANYA ROY

VEDIKA KABRA

UTKARSHA GAIDHANE

RIYA R GAIKAWAD

ABEL MATHEW

BHOOMI AGARWAL

NISHAT FATHIMA

GOURI AMMANAGI

ARJUN V S

THE CONTENT TEAM

HAILEY THOMAS

LEEZA THOTTAN

DHRITI VERMA

NOOPUR JOGLEKAR

NIHARIKA SONI

SAUMYA GUPTA

KASHVI KEYA

SANJANA BHERI

MAHIKA KHANDELWAL

SHRIJA

SANJANA REDDY

YASHITA

SHRUTI KUNDNANI

THE PR TEAM

GURNOOR KAUR

ASMITA AMLA

AONEN

UDAY CHOUDHARY

SUHANI MAINI

PRATYUSHA DONDAPATI

KHUSHI GULATI

DHANYA SRI

THE PHOTOGRAPHY TEAM

PRANAV KHER

PRIYA MISHRA

SAMYAK DHOKE

FAIZ

THE EDITORIAL BOARD

NOOPUR JOGLEKAR

DHRITI VERMA

ASHISH SINHA

THE FACULTY

JYOTIRMAI SINGOTHU

K. ANANT PHANI

GAJAM RAJESH KUMAR

Until next time;)

Fashion Art Stationary

Best shop of tailoring Items, Art and Craft Material

Xerox | Art and Craft | Office Stationary | Gift
School & College Architecture Material

9687922257

Free shipping

#1 - 95/15/1/192, Beside Durgam Cheruvu Metro STation, Pillar No. CI753, Arunodaya Colony, Madhapur, Hyd, 81

Exclusive Printing Partner of MERAKI Spectrum 2023

- Color Xerox
- B/W Xerox
- A2 A3 Spiral Binding
- Color Printouts
- Engineering Material
- Painting Material
- Lamination
- Tailoring Material
- All color Art Paper Project Binding

राष्ट्रीय फैशन प्रौद्योगिकी संस्थान nift
National Institute of Fashion Technology